

漫画人

JAPANESE
POP CULTURE
& LANGUAGE LEARNING

$4.50

MANGAJIN

No. 18

THE CORPORATE WARRIOR
A Dying Breed?

CONTENTS

page 6

page 42

page 68

FEATURES

特集

tokushū

6 Kigyō Senshi, The Corporate Warrior

Is the Japanese “salaryman” a selfless corporate soldier, prepared to make even the ultimate sacrifice for his company? There seems to be dissension in the ranks.

DEPARTMENTS

連載コラム

ren sai koramu

4 Letters

Seward's complaint; raves for The Tunnels; a blooper story, & more.

5 Brand News

What do you call a new kind of washing machine that cleans with air bubbles?

14 Books

Rising Sun, by Michael Crichton; Shōshaman, by Arai Shinya; books on business

21 Computer Corner

Info on CompuServe's Japan and Japanese-related forums

22 Basic Japanese: Informal Politeness

The word “politeness” is a convenient simplification, but there are actually several dimensions involved.

76 Classifieds

78 MANGAJIN • MONO

New this issue: Obatarian 5-volume set; O-jama Shimasu 3-volume set

80 Vocabulary Summary

MANGA

漫画

manga

10 Sarariiman Senka • サラリーマン専科, by Shōji Sadao

18 Calvin and Hobbes, by Bill Watterson

26 Obatarian • オバタリアン, by Hotta Katsuhiko

27 Ojama Shimasu • オジャマします, by Imazeki Shin

29 Eigyō Tenteko Nisshi • 営業てんでこ日誌, by Gyū & Kondō

45 The Phoenix • 火の鳥, by Tezuka Osamu

63 Oishinbo • 美味しんぼ, by Kariya & Hanasaki

漫画人

MANGAJIN

Editor & Publisher
Vaughan P. Simmons

Advising & Contributing Editors
Peter Goodman
Murahashi Maki
Karen Sandness
Frederik L. Schodt
Jack Seward

Language Editor
Wayne Lammers

Contributing Writers
Ono Kosei
D.C. Palter
Mark Schilling

Editorial Assistant
Virginia Murray

Art & Graphics
Ashizawa Kazuko

Business Manager
Brett A. Pawlowski
Tel. 404-634-2276 Fax 404-634-1799

Subscription/Office Manager
Mary Ann Beech
Tel. 404-634-3874

Marketing Manager
Greg Tenhover
Tel. 404-248-9279

Advisory Board
Wayne Hintze, Laurie Killackey, Doug Reynolds, John Steed

Cover: Kazuko
(based on a character by Yoshū Chikanobu)

MANGAJIN (ISSN 1051-8177) is published 10 times a year, monthly except January and July, by: Mangajin, Inc., 2531 Briarcliff Rd., Suite 121, Atlanta, GA 30329.

Second class postage paid at Atlanta, GA 30304 and additional offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to: Mangajin, P.O. Box 49543, Atlanta, GA 30359. USPS # 006137

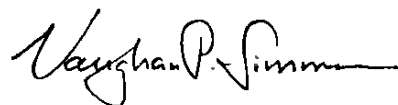

Subscription prices:
$30/year in US, $45/year in Canada.
Overseas (except Japan) subscriptions:
$70/year (airmail only).
Exclusive agent in Japan:
Sekai Shuppan Kenkyu Centre,
Minami Aoyama 2-18-9, Minato-ku, Tokyo
Tel. 03-3479-4434, Fax 03-3479-4436.
Subscriptions in Japan: ¥9,000/year

Editor's Note

You have no doubt noticed that we are now using glossy paper and color inside MANGAJIN. Don't worry, we're not being extravagant. We switched printers and this paper actually costs us less than the old plain offset paper we had been using since issue No.1. We had believed for a long time that the manga material, having been created for printing on cheap newsprint, would look "funny" on a coated, glossy stock. The problem was that photos look terrible printed on plain uncoated paper, and it's not suitable for color. Just for fun, we tried printing a few manga pages on a coated paper last month and they looked great! The rest is history.

Our subscriber survey earlier this year showed a lot of business people and people who were interested in the business aspect of Japanese culture. This "Corporate Warrior" issue of MANGAJIN is especially for them, but it's also an issue about the intermeshing between business and culture that seems so deep in Japan. This goes in both directions. A country's culture obviously influences business practices, but in Japan, business also has a strong influence on culture. The Japanese business novel is accepted as a part of the literary mainstream, TV drama is frequently in a business setting, and of course, business and salaryman manga are some of the best selling. Our feature story about the Corporate Warrior provides part of the explanation for this phenomenon—if you view business people as soldiers rather than drones, their lives suddenly become more interesting.

Speaking of business drama, we are sad to report that fellow publication Business Tokyo is apparently ceasing operations as of July 1992. We will be trying to fill some of the information void created by this loss, and as of our next issue, we will expand to 88 pages.

The name MANGAJIN is registered in the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office.

Copyright © 1992 by MANGAJIN, Inc. All rights reserved.
• Calvin and Hobbes, by Bill Watterson, from The Essential Calvin and Hobbes, copyright © 1988 Universal Press Syndicate; also from The Authoritative Calvin and Hobbes, copyright © 1990 Universal Press Syndicate. All rights reserved. Reprinted/translated by permission of Editors Press Service, N.Y. • Sarariiman Senka, by Sadao Shoji, first published in Japan in 1989 by Kōdansha Ltd., Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Kōdansha Ltd. • Obatarian, by Hotta Katsuhiko, first published in Japan in 1989 by Take Shobō, Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Take Shobō. • O-jama Shimasu, by Imazeki Shin, first published in Japan in 1987 by Take Shobō, Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Take Shobō. • Eigyō Tenteko Nisshi, by Gyū Jirō and Kondō Yōsuke, first published in Japan in 1988 by Sukora, Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Sukora. • Phoenix, by Tezuka Osamu, first published in Japan in 1986 by Tezuka Productions, Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Tezuka Productions. • Oishinbo, by Kariya Tetsu and Hanasaki Akira, first published in Japan in 1985 by Shōgakkan, Tōkyō. Publication in MANGAJIN arranged through Shōgakkan.

PALATE PLEASING NEWS!

Bring Home The Wonder Of Japan, Again and Again.

SPECIAL OFFER

Explore the magical new world of Japanese food and culture with "A Taste of Japan," Volume 1. Take an intimate look at the special art of eating in Volume 2. Start your collection now!

$15.00 OFF

FOR A TASTE OF JAPAN SET OF 2

$3.00 OFF

THEY'RE A LAR RATE IF $24.50 EACH.

ORDER NOW

SEND ME THE PALATE PLEASERES VHS video set "A Taste of Japan," Volume 1 and 2 at the special price of only $42.00* (plus $4.00 shipping and handling) for both or an individual order for Volume 1 or 2 at $23.50* each (plus $4.00 shipping and handling). Foreign rates available upon request. BONUS: No additional shipping or handling charge for orders of 2 or more.

	Qty.	Total
Taste of Japan Vol. 1 & 2 Set
Taste of Japan Vol. 1 only Taste of Japan Vol. 2(Sushi) only

Tax(CA 8.25%) _____
 Subtotal _____
 Shipping & Handling _____
 Total enclosed _____

Enclosed is my order for _____ set(s) of both Volume 1 and 2 along with a check for $ _____.

Enclosed is my order for _____ video(s) Volume 1 or 2 (please circle one) along with a check for $ _____.

Make check payable to:
 APCON International, Inc., 420 Boyd Street, Suite 502,
 Los Angeles, CA 90013

Name _____

Address _____ Apt# _____

City/State/Zip _____

Telephone (____) _____

*California residents please add 8.25% sales tax. Please enclose card in envelope.

Letters to the Editor

MANGAJIN welcomes readers' comments by letter or fax, although we reserve the right to edit for clarity or length. Please address correspondence to: Editor, P.O. Box 49543, Atlanta, GA 30359. Fax: 404-634-1799

Seward speaks

I'd like to make a comment as a reader of MANGAJIN: I find the manga Oishinbo somehow offensive. From the Japanese viewpoint it is patronizing. I can see that Japanese readers would delight in such a manga because it puts the Japanese in a superior position of teaching and leading the untutored barbarians from the West by the hand into the glorious world of Japan (in this case, the world of Japanese cuisine). To be sure, the Japanese are qualified to teach us about Japanese cooking, just as we might be qualified to teach them about some of our regional dishes. However, in the Oishinbo manga, Jeff is so utterly truckling and obsequious that he practically grovels at the feet of the Japanese. He accepts everything the "superior" Japanese do and say without demurrer. I wish that he might now and then show a spark of independence and tell his Japanese friends and mentors where they can put their hōchō. There must be more mature and interesting manga among the many I'm sure you review.

JACK SEWARD
Houston, TX

Part of our job here at MANGAJIN is to give Americans a peek behind the curtain and show what's going on in Japanese manga and pop culture. The portrayal of gaijin in manga also seems to be a subject of interest to our readers, and Oishinbo is an interesting example in that respect.

Of course, the story was written for a Japanese audience, and for the most part, I think Jeff Larson simply acts like a Japanese character. He is admittedly an exaggerated stereotype of the humble and sunao Japanese Mr. Good-Guy, but after all, this is a manga. Even the confrontational behavior that Jeff shows in refusing training in the shop Tanimura has selected for him, and openly criticizing the chef in that shop is not so uncommon for Japanese characters (in the world of manga and TV drama, at least). Such characters are admired for having the strength to stand up for their principles.

If an American manga character had to become "Japanese" to be a hero, there would be cause for concern, but I don't feel that is really the case. This story at least provides a contrast to the recent Sakurauchi comment about lazy, uneducated Americans—in the end, Jeff wins out over his Japanese competition.

At any rate, I look forward to hearing your reactions to Part IV of Oishinbo (in MANGAJIN No. 19). — Ed.

Really into The Tunnels

I recently bought my first copy of MANGAJIN [No. 16], and as I was browsing through the pages, I came across the letter about [comedy duo] The Tunnels (とんねるず). I am a great fan of The Tunnels, and I take exception to Mr. Wancura's statement that "The Tunnels are fairly popular and can be seen in a revamped but less-funny version of Minasan, no Okage Desu." That's not true! The Tunnels are still very, very popular and are the featured act on many TV programs. They are not just comedians; one is a professional athlete and the other is a singer who has won many music awards. Even M.C. Hammer has joined them on their show. The Tunnels are still growing, bigger and bigger!!

FUMIKO NAKANO
Tochigi-ken, Japan

It sounds like the end of The Tunnels is nowhere in sight—we can't take this lightly.

Yukara AT

Interesting that you should pan Yukara AT—especially on a page opposite a Yukara AT advertisement [MANGAJIN #15]! Only the best magazines will pan products which are advertised in their pages. Keep up the good work.
BILL STONE
Dallas, TX

I didn't think we really "panned" Yukara AT, we simply presented an objective evaluation of its strengths and weaknesses, and made some general comments about the PC vs. Mac dilemma. Yukara AT is certainly a good choice for some users, and it stacks up favorably against the competition in its category (Japanese word processing on the IBM-PC and compatibles). Maybe people are so accustomed to "gushing" reviews that a neutral one seems negative. If we gush in our reviews, you better believe it's an exceptional product.

Black & White Issues

I was glad to see the article "Black & White Issues (II)" by Frederik L. Schodt (MANGAJIN No. 16). As a student who will be going to Japan soon, I was worried about Japanese racism. I thought it was outright hatred like that

(continued on page 28)

BLOOPERS

We'll send you a MANGAJIN T-shirt if we publish your language (Japanese or English) blooper.

I was working in the education department of the Shiyakusho, or City Hall. I had skipped breakfast and went down to the little shop on the first floor, but my choice of breakfast items was limited to mashed potatoes, sandwiches, or Coke. Upon returning to my section of the office, I wanted to say, "City Hall doesn't have a good shop, does it?"—"Shiyakusho wa ii baiten ga nai desu ne." Instead, I blurted out in a loud voice "Shiyakusho wa ii baishun ga nai desu ne"—"City Hall doesn't have any good prostitutes, does it?" The laughter went on for minutes and my embarrassment was only compounded when section chiefs started grabbing bewildered, giggling OLs and parading them before my desk, shouting "Chigau, chigau!" ("You're wrong, you're wrong!").

GAVIN MIDDLETON
Onoda, Japan

a selection of
CREATIVE PRODUCT NAMES

AWASH

「気泡」で洗う

This washing machine from Sharp uses a stream of air bubbles to provide part of the cleaning action, hence the name AWASH, a combination of awa (泡, “bubble” or “foam”) + wash.

The name presents one problem; awa could bring to mind the foam created by the detergent instead of the bubbles added by the machine. A more appropriate word in this case would be kihō (気泡, “air bubble”) but this ruins a perfectly good pun. The marketing people at Sharp solved this problem in a manner possible only in Japanese—they wrote the characters for kihō, but with furigana (hiragana written to the side of the kanji) telling us to read it as awa.

気泡あわ で 洗あらう。
awa de arau
bubble(s)/foam with wash

The AWASH is supposed to be gentle to delicate clothing, and quiet enough to operate even late at night in an apartment without disturbing the neighbors.

れんたろう Rentarō

ピッタリ れんたろう

One of the features in a new line of VCRs from Panasonic is special circuitry to compensate for the poor picture and sound quality of rented videos. Two of these models feature the name Rentarō (れんたろう).

The word rentaru (レンタル) is used to refer to “rental” videos, but the -ru ending makes it look like a Japanese verb, and rentarō would be the form which means “let’s rent (a movie).”

Another facet to this pun is the fact that rentarō looks like a combination of rentaru + tarō (太郎) a common male name ending, now used in a variety of product names, with a connotation something like “-Boy.” Rentarō could therefore mean something like “Rental-Boy.”

Rentarō also brings to mind the Japanese actor Rentarō Mikuni (三國連太郎), but the promotional material features Carl Lewis. The link here is that the automatic record feature on these machines can be used to tape the Barcelona Olympics which will be aired by satellite broadcast mostly in the early morning hours in Japan.

The word ピッタリ (pittari, “exactly/just”) in the name refers to the precision of the automatic recording feature.

Thanx to: 歩太郎/Potarō

Send us your examples of creative product names or slogans (with some kind of documentation). If we publish your example, we’ll send you a MANGAJIN T-shirt to wear on your next shopping trip. In case of duplicate entries, earliest postmark gets the shirt. BRAND NEWS, P.O. Box 49543, Atlanta, GA 30359

KIGYŌ SENSŨI

The Corporate Warrior

For the sarariiman in the corporate trenches, selfless devotion to the company is no longer the norm

by

Mark Schilling

If business is war, then the Japanese sarariiman ("salarymen" or salaried white-collar office workers) are among the world's most dedicated warriors. They not only work nearly 200 hours a year more than their U.S. counterparts, but have long subscribed to an ethic of corporate loyalty and individual self-denial that strikes many foreigners—and even Japanese themselves—as feudal, with the sarariiman playing the role of kerai (家来, "retainer") and the company president, daimyō (大名, "lord").

A more modern parallel, often drawn (as in this month's feature manga), is between the corporation and the old Imperial Army. The kigyō senshi (企業戦士, corporate warriors) going over the top may be wearing blue suits and white shirts—the standard-issue sarariiman uniform—but they are still forced to make soldier-like sacrifices, including the ultimate one. Karōshi (過労死), or death caused by overwork, emerged as a major social issue in the late 1980s.

The number of karōshi victims is a matter of fierce debate: in 1989 the Ministry of Health and Welfare (厚生省, Kōseishō) recognized only 30 out of 777 applications for karōshi compensation, while karōshi activists claim that as many as 100,000 Japanese are dying annually of strokes and heart attacks caused by overwork. But to many office workers, the threat of karōshi is a very real one. In a recent poll of 3,000 Tōkyō residents, 46 percent of the respondents said that they "worked too hard" and nearly 60 percent answered in the affirmative when asked whether they worried about themselves or someone near them falling victim to karōshi.

En route to an early grave, the kigyō senshi is expected to unquestioningly obey his company's orders. If the company transfers him to a distant prefecture or a foreign country, he will go even if it means leaving his family behind. This phenomenon, called tanshin funin (単身赴任, literally, "proceeding alone to one's post"), is so widespread that businesses have sprung up expressly to serve the needs of "corporate bachelors." The reasons for tanshin funin are varied—children may have to study for entrance examinations, wives to care for aged relatives—but the acquiescence of the sarariiman has long been a given. He is supposed to be the willing corporate point man, serving alone on three- or even five-year patrols.

And even the kigyō senshi who stays at headquarters is often expected to devote all waking hours to the company. After putting in an eight-hour day, he may "donate" an extra two or three hours in sābisu zangyō (サービス残業, "service" or unpaid overtime). And when he finally heads for the door he is often on his way to an after-hours drinking session with a customer or colleague (a weekday custom observed by 77 percent of the sarariiman respondents to a recent Tokai Bank survey). Even on Sundays—the day set aside for famirī sābisu (ファミリーサービス, "family service," or family time)—he often finds himself on the golf course, strengthening relationships with those same colleagues and customers (63 percent of the Tokai Bank poll respondents are weekend golfers).

Why do they do it? The Confucian work ethic is one reason. "In Italy, they have a saying: The man who works himself to death is a fool. In Japan we believe just the opposite: The harder the worker, the better the man," comments Kawahito Hiroshi, a lawyer who represents the families of karōshi victims.

A corollary of that belief, says Saito Satoru, a psychiatrist who founded Japan's first support group for workaholic sarariiman, is a strong sense of guilt if work is not performed well or on time. "That's why they are willing to work overtime for free: they feel that if they can't do all work assigned to them for a given day, they shouldn't receive their pay," explains Saito.

Also, because Japanese are raised to value cooperation over self-assertiveness (the nail that sticks out gets hammered down), kigyō find it relatively easy to indoctrinate them with corporate values, including a selfless dedication to work. "American workaholics tend to view themselves as heroes, but their Japanese counterparts are more passive," says Saito. "They may want to work only an appropriate amount when they first join a company, but they soon begin to behave like the people around them—and Japanese society as a whole is workaholic."

Workers who become part of the workaholic team often end up sacrificing their own interests—and even identities—in the process. The typical sarariiman introduces himself by referring to his company: "Mitsubishi Jūkō no Suzuki de gozaimasu" ("I am Suzuki of Mitsubishi Heavy Industries"). He also identifies strongly with his kigyō: its success is his success, its failure is his failure. "In Japan everyone thinks like a company president," comments Saito. "In America a low-ranking worker wouldn't ordinarily worry about the world economic situation: he just does the job he is paid to do. But in Japan everybody worries about it."

The worst worriers are probably middle-aged sarariiman, who are, not coincidentally, under the most pressure. Forty-something baby boomers must elbow their way through a crowd of colleagues for the relative handful of middle management jobs. And even those not aspiring to be kachō (課長, "section manager") or buchō (部長, "department manager") have quotas to fill, deadlines to meet, customers to please. "The fear of failure to meet group expectations and norms creates tremendous psychological stress," says Kawahito. It also creates yet another incentive to become a workaholic kigyō senshi.

But more younger workers are resisting those incentives. In the 1970s and 1980s, companies concerned about the lax spirit of pampered modern youth began to ship their shinnyū shain (新人社員, "new employees") off to Zen

FAST, EFFECTIVE & AFFORDABLE

Speak Japanese or English for just $275*

Now you can learn to speak Japanese or English with confidence, using the world-famous Berlitz Conversational Method.

- Small groups of 6 to 8 students
- Price includes 30 lessons, book and fees
- Native-fluent teachers ensure proper pronunciation
- Meet conveniently -- days or evenings

*Price based on group of 6 students. Groups of 4 to 5 are only $329. Private and Semi-Private programs are also available. In Japan, Group programs are not available. Call today for the phone number of the Berlitz Language Center nearest you.

Berlitz Japan
81-3-3589-3525

Berlitz USA
808-528-7929

NEGOTIATING WITH THE JAPANESE

A hands-on executive seminar designed to improve the global competitiveness of your company

Is your company interested in doing business with Japan? Are you currently working with the Japanese but want that extra "edge" during negotiations? If so, you should attend Negotiating with the Japanese, a seminar from the University of Michigan.

Negotiating with the Japanese is a practical seminar designed specifically for businessmen who want to increase their understanding of Japanese negotiating techniques. This seminar covers:

- How to recognize and respond to specific Japanese negotiating techniques and practices;
- How communication can make or break your deal;
- What gets done at the negotiating table—and away from it;
- And much more, including a role-playing negotiation session with Japanese counterparts.

Upcoming seminars are from 9/30 through 10/2 and 3/3 through 3/5 (1993). For more information, please call the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor at (313) 936-2188.

temples for intensive meditation sessions or to special corporate boot camps, where bawling instructors ran them through a harsh, often intentionally humiliating, training regime (including exercises such as making them sing alone at the top of their lungs in front of a busy train station).

The object was the same as that of any boot camp—to transform self-willed boys into team-oriented men—but with an emphasis on “purity of spirit” that was purely Japanese.

These corporate attempts to hold the spiritual line have been less than successful. Ironically, as the image of the fanatically loyal, mindlessly self-sacrificing sarariman spread in the West though such books as Rising Sun (with a change in uniform and locale, Michael Crichton’s kigyō senshi could be soldiers in a wartime Yellow Peril movie), the real thing is becoming rarer in Japan. “We are becoming more like Americans,” says Yoshida Kazuya, a sales manager for Yamaichi Securities. “I used to bring my home work with me, but not anymore. While I’m at home I try to forget it as much as possible.”

Surveys show that he is not the only one to give greater priority to home life. In a 1991 poll of sarariman conducted by Dentsu, 46 percent of the respondents said that they “consider family more important than work,” compared with 28 percent in 1976 (similar percentages for women were 64 percent and 44 percent). Only 11 percent said that it was “all right to sacrifice family for the sake of work.” “The generation that was born in the 1960s no longer feels that work should come before family,” explains Tomisa Yasushi, manager of Dentsu’s Consumer Marketing Studies Department.

Also, 30 percent of respondents, both male and female, say that they put leisure before work, compared with just 12 percent in 1976. Those holding the opposite view account for only 21 percent of the total. “Most of those putting leisure first are in their 20s to early 30s,” says Tomisa. “They came of age when Japan was already a high-consumption society. They are used to enjoying their lives.”

In other words, a young kigyō senshi may still be singing the corporate song, but he is more likely to be dreaming about a weekend drive with his girlfriend than pondering the meaning of the do-or-die lyrics.

Faced with a labor shortage and a shrinking pool of new workers, companies have become accommodating more of their shinjinrui (新人類, “new breed”) employees. Instead of shipping them off to corporate boot camp, they are luring them with “training seminars” in Hawaii.

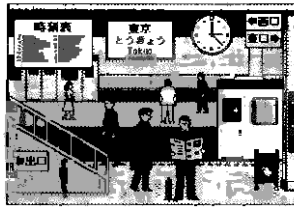

But young employees, less enamored of Japan’s famed shūshin koyōsei (終身雇用制, “lifetime employment system”) than were their security-minded fathers, are changing jobs with increasing frequency, sometimes only a

JapanEase™ for Macintosh $99.95 Each Volume

Vol.1 Katakana Here's a highly interactive and fun way to dramatically expand your Japanese vocabulary and learn the katakana alphabet. You'll learn more than 300 gairaigo, or foreign loanwords, which are commonly used in Japan. In addition, you'll learn 50 basic Japanese expressions, how to count, tell time and say dates in Japanese, plus lots more!

Vol.2 Hiragana Grammar Enjoy learning the hiragana alphabet and Japanese grammar with the aid of graceful animation and native-speaker pronunciation. Quickly master more than 100 essential sentence structures and an extensive, useful vocabulary. Plus, use the bilingual dictionary to instantly look up unfamiliar words, without flipping dictionary pages!

Ayumi Software - A Division of Qualitas Trading Co.

Qualitas Trading Co. 2029 Durant Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94704 Phone (510) 848-8080 / Fax (510) 848-8009

Qualitas Japan Inc. 151 Yarai-sho, Suite 405 Shunjuku-ku, Tokyo, 162 Japan Phone (03) 3267-8766 / Fax (03) 3267-8725

SITUATIONAL FUNCTIONAL JAPANESE TSUKUBA LANGUAGE GROUP

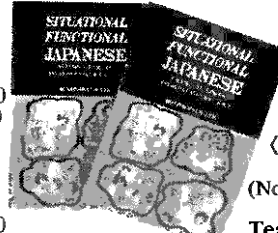

JUST COMING

(Volume One)
Notes ¥3,000
Drills ¥2,600
Notes Tapes ¥3,200
Drills Tapes ¥3,200

(Volume Two)
Notes ¥2,800
Drills ¥2,600
Notes Tapes ¥2,400
Drills Tapes ¥3,200

IN PREPARATION

(Volume Three)
(Notes, Drills, Tapes)
Teacher's Manual

SITUATIONAL FUNCTIONAL JAPANESE was written for learners with no previous knowledge of Japanese. It has, however, also been shown to be effective as a review text giving language skills useful for life in Japan to those who have studied Japanese outside Japan using non-communicative approaches such as the structural or grammar-translation methods.

• For more information, contact as below.

BONJINSHA Co., LTD.

OVERSEAS ORDER DEPT. JAC Building 5-5-35, Kohnan, Minato-ku, Tokyo 108, Japan
TELEPHONE: 03-3472-2240 FACSIMILE: 03-3472-2129

year or two after entering a company. Because they are hard to distinguish from recent college graduates joining the corporate ranks for the first time, these young job changers have come to be known as daini shinsotsu (第二新卒, "second-time new graduates").

Others, called furiitā (フリーター, a contraction of furii arubait or "free part-timer"), disdain regular employment altogether, preferring to hire out their services by the project. Many are editors, journalists and others working in communications-related fields.

The recent decline in Japan's economic fortunes, however, has put a squeeze on corporate profits—and free-spending recruitment practices. "Companies are not indulging new employees as much as they used to," says Tomisa. "They simply can't afford to."

But with the unemployment rate still low—in April it stood at two percent, with 1.17 jobs available for every job seeker—the steady Westernization of the Japanese workplace continues. More companies are adopting a five-day work week (58.3 percent, according to a 1991 Ministry of Labor report) and allowing employees to refuse tanshin funin transfers. Tōyō Sash, a leading maker of aluminum housing materials, gives its 15,000 employees the option of transferring nationwide, within twelve regional blocks or within commuting distance of their present homes. And the company assures the 40 percent who have chosen the last option that they have not damaged their chances for advancement.

Do these and other changes mean that the kigyō senshi may someday go the way of his spiritual forebearer, the samurai? Psychiatrist Saito has his doubts. "I'm inclined to be a pessimist: workaholicism is too deeply ingrained in the Japanese character. But if there's any hope, it's with the younger generation. More of them are starting to wonder what life is all about—and realizing that it isn't just work."

Mark Schilling is a freelance writer and translator living in Japan since 1975. Correspondence to: 1105 Pearl House, 4-1-10 Kami-Saginomiya, Nakano-ku, Tokyo 〒165 Japan.

Samurai-speak Still Survives

Traces of Japan's classical warrior culture still live on in present day Japan. This culture, which arose in the Ninth Century A.D., dominated the history of Japan from the twelfth century—when the great houses of the Heike and the Genji fought a decisive war—until the country opened its doors to the West with the Meiji Restoration in 1868.

The Meiji Restoration, however, was not a Japanese version of the American or French Revolutions. Here, instead of the rising bourgeois leaders of the revolutions in the West, we find young men from samurai families leading Meiji Japan. These spirited young warriors brought a long list of late-period samurai values and expressions into modern Japanese society. Because they were so successful in modernizing Japan, this samurai linguistic heritage has survived into the post-World War II period. Here are a few examples.

さようなら

Sayōnara

"Good-bye."

This expression literally means "if it is so, . . ." and was used during the changing of sentries at a castle gate. As the relief came to take his shift, he would ask the samurai on duty: "How's everything?" The sentry would reply: "Everything seems all right." The relief would then take his position saying: "If it is so, let me take your place." The word sayōnara ("if it is so.") thus came to be used when two people part.

真剣になれ

Shinken ni nare

"Get serious."

Although usually translated as "get serious," it literally means "get your real sword." The term shinken (真剣, "real sword") is used here in contrast to shinai (竹刀, "bamboo sword") and bokutō (木刀, "wooden sword"), both of which were used by warriors in training.

切腹ものだ

Seppuku mono da

"You're in real trouble!"

"Harakiri"—a vulgar way of saying seppuku—has somehow become the more popular term in the West for death by self-disembowelment, so you could translate this as: "You ought to commit harakiri!" Seppuku is no longer practiced as the ultimate act of atonement, but the expression is still used to emphasize the severity of a blunder. Seppuku is written with the kanji for "cut-stomach," and uses the Chinese readings, while harakiri reverses the kanji (腹切) and uses the old Japanese readings.

横槍が入った

Yokoyari ga haïtta

"We were interrupted."

Literally this means "we've been attacked on the flank by enemy lances." Yoko = "side/flank," and yari = "spear/lance." Japanese businessmen often use this expression when an interruption occurs or when their project proposals and business plans are attacked by others.

闇討ちにあった

Yamiuchi ni atta

"They stabbed me in the back!"

Literally this means, "I suffered a night assault." Yami = "darkness," and uchi is the noun form of the verb utsu = "hit/attack/assault."

太刀打ちができる

Tachi-uchi ga dekiru

"Be a match (for someone)."

This expression is used in the episode of Oishinbo featured in this issue. Turn to page 64, frame 3 to see this one in action.

— Okamoto Yutaka

サラリーマン専科

© Sadao Shoji, All rights reserved. First published in Japan in 1989 by Kōdansha Ltd., Tokyo
English translation rights arranged through Kōdansha Ltd.

Title: サラリーマン 専科
Sarariiman Senka
Salaryman Seminar

- sarariiman is a word coined by the Japanese from the English words “salary” and “man.” It refers to a salaried company employee, usually a white collar office worker (male only).
- senka means “specialized course,” and we stretched this to “seminar” even though the words seminā and zemināru are also used to mean “seminar” in Japanese.

1

Letter: 辞令 博多 支社 勤務 を 命ず
Jirei Hakata shisha kinmu o meizu appointment Hakata branch office duty (obj.) order/command

Notice of Appointment: (You are) assigned to duty at the Hakata Branch Office. (PL2)

- jirei is the word used for official orders and notices of appointment/transfer.
- Hakata is the old name for Fukuoka, in Northern Kyūshū; it remains the name of a district within the city.
- meizu is a classical Japanese declarative form of the verb meijiru (“order/command”); the form continues to be used sometimes in formal documents.

2

Husband: 単身赴任する よりほかない だろ
Tanshin funin suru yori hoka nai daro go to post alone no choice but probably

“I suppose there’s nothing for me to do but go to my (transfer) post alone.” (PL2)

- tanshin funin refers to men who are transferred by their company to another city but choose to leave their families behind, often for the sake of the children’s schooling. Adding suru makes it a verb.
- ... *yor*i means “rather than . . . /other than . . .,” and hoka alone means “other/another,” so there is a bit of redundancy in *yor*i hoka nai, but the meaning is clearly “there is nothing other than . . . /no other choice.”
- *dar*o (= darō) means “perhaps/probably/I suppose.”

3

Husband: 一人で だいじょぶ だ ってば
Hitori de daijobu da tte ba
 By myself all right is/am I say

“I’ll be fine by myself, I tell you.” (PL2)

Wife: どんどこに 住む の か みて おかないと Donna toko ni sumu no ka mite okanai to what kind of place in/at live (nom.) (?) see must

“I have to see what kind of place you’ll be living in.” (PL2)

- daijobu = daijōbu = “all right/fine”
- da tte ba is a contraction of da to ieba, literally “if I say/tell you . . .” — implying “then it’s really all right/really that way.”
- toko is a contraction of tokoro (“place”).
- mite okanai to implies mite okanai to ikenai, where -nai to ikenai means “must/have to” (cf. -nakereba naranai; -nakute wa ikenai). mite oku is from the verbs miru (“look at/see”) and oku (“leave/set down”), which together mean “see/take a look for future reference.”

4

Sound FX: カチャ
Kacha
Click (sound of door latch opening)

5

Wife: ここ が キッチン . . .
Koko ga kitchin
 here (subj) kitchen
“This is the kitchen . . .” (PL2)

- koko literally means “here,” and “Here’s the kitchen” would be an acceptable translation, but koko is frequently used like “this,” so we went with “This is . . .” in these panels.

6

Wife: ここ が 浴室 . . .
Koko ga yokushitsu
 here (subj) bathroom
“This is the bath . . .” (PL2)

- yokushitsu refers only to the room with the bathtub, not to the room where the toilet is.

7

Wife: ここがベランダで...
Koko ga beranda de here (subj) veranda is-and
“This is the veranda, and . . .” (PL2)

8

Wife: 寝るのはここで枕がこっち
Neru no wa koko de makura ga kocchi sleeping as-for here is-and pillow (subj) this way “He’ll sleep here, and his pillow will be over here.” (PL2)

- no makes the verb neru (“sleep”) into a noun (“sleeping”), and wa marks it as the topic of the sentence, “as for sleeping, (it will be here)” → “he will sleep here.”
- de functions here as the -te form of desu.

9

Wife: そうするとこのあたりに...
Sō suru to kono atari ni in that case this vicinity in/at “So, right about here . . .” (PL2)

- sō suru to literally means “if I/you do that,” but it’s used idiomatically to mean “in that case/then/so.”

10

Wife: こうはる...と Kō haru to like this post/stick up (intent)
“I’ll put up (this poster) like this.” (PL2)

- kō = “in this way/like this”
- haru = “stick/paste/post”
- to here implies something like to shiyō, the form of suru (“do”) that shows will/intent.

11

Poster: 危険な情事 Kiken-na Jōji dangerous love affair
Fatal Attraction
 全米騒然 Zenbei sōzen
 all-U.S. uproar
The film that has the whole U.S. talking

ロードショー
Rōdo shō
Road Show (“At Theaters Everywhere”)

男は一夜の恋と思った
Otoko wa ichiya no koi to omotta man as-for one night’s love (quote) thought
He thought it was a one-night stand

女は宿命の絆と感じた
Onna wa shukumei no kizuna to kanjita woman as-for fate (of) bonds (quote) felt
She felt they were bound by fate

- omotta is the plain/abrupt past form of omou (“think/feel”).
- kanjita is the plain/abrupt past form of kanjiru (“sense/feel/think”).
- the to in both cases is the same to as for quotes, here showing that the preceding phrase is what/how the person thought/felt rather than what he/she said.
- koi refers only to romantic/sexual love, as opposed to ai, which can refer to all types of love.

Rising Sun

Michael Crichton. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1992.
355 pages, $22.00 (hardcover).

In Michael Crichton's controversial murder mystery Rising Sun there is no doubt about who did it. The Japanese did. But the murder of a beautiful young American party girl during the star-studded opening of the Nakamoto Tower serves only as a backdrop for Crichton to expose what he thinks is the real crime—Japan's conspiracy to take over America.

The story begins after Cheryl Austin, a paid escort to the wealthy and influential, is found raped and apparently strangled to death on a conference table above the executive offices of Nakamoto Industries' new American headquarters in Los Angeles. Detective Peter Smith, a new member of Special Services, the department's diplomatic section that acts as a liaison for dealing with foreign nationals, is called in to assist the regular LAPD. Smith enlists the help of semi-retired police detective John Connor, who has lived in Japan, speaks the language, and now acts as a consultant to the police on difficult cases. As the investigation progresses, Smith and Connor tie the girl's death to the imminent purchase of an American high-technology company. The two detectives encounter a web of corporate and political intrigue surrounding a conspiracy by Japanese interests to gain control of America's vital industries.

The voices of the main characters are established very early in the story. Smith is the naive American Everyman who simmers with righteous indignation as he slowly learns the "truth" about Japanese business and culture. Connor, omniscient authority on everything related to Japan, is Smith's guide through all that seems inscrutable about the Japanese. Connor also serves as Crichton's voice for lamenting America's decline.

As the story progresses, we sense a shift in attitudes—characters who initially seem believable, intellectually astute, and sensitive to differences in culture, harden and begin to launch a vicious assault on Japan's motives and behavior until the death of Cheryl Austin begins to seem a metaphor for the death of America.

MICHAEL CRICHTON

Just like Oliver Stone's JFK, Rising Sun caters to America's obsessive fascination with conspiracy theories. To convince us the book is firmly grounded in economic and political reality, Crichton writes in his bibliography that his "approach to Japan's economic behavior, and America's inadequate response to it, follows a well-established body of expert opinion." But

(continued on page 20)

The Japanese language in Rising Sun

There is quite a bit of Japanese dialog in Rising Sun, mostly between Connor, the Japanophile senior detective, and the various Japanese characters in the story. For the most part the Japanese is quite natural, and it's obvious Crichton did his homework. Translations are given only in the context of the story—Connor explaining to Smith or the other Americans what has just been said. Not infrequently the reader is expected to supply the translation, but never at the risk of confusion in the story line.

The most glaring exception to the naturalness of the Japanese in Rising Sun is Connor's use of the word kōhai in addressing Smith, the "junior" detective. Referring to the relationship between Connor and Smith as a senpai-kōhai relationship is certainly valid, and Crichton's explanation of the relationship is adequate: "a senpai is a senior man who guides a junior man known as a kōhai . . . the senpai is expected to indulge his kōhai and put up with all sorts of youthful excesses and errors from the junior man."

The problem is that, while the junior generally addresses his senior as "senpai," the senior typically addresses the junior by name, with the suffix -kun substituted for -san, or with no honorific suffix at all (yobi-sute). It is definitely unnatural for a senpai to address his kōhai as "kōhai," but Connor does so throughout the book.

To his credit, Crichton goes to the trouble to put long marks over long vowels, and the style of romanization is much the same as that used in MANGAJIN. Of course there are no indications of politeness levels, but this is usually obvious from the situation and the speaker. Be warned that there is considerable PL1 and PL2 language.

We found only one flat-out mistake (apparently a typo) in the Japanese. On page 301, Connor says "Sō omowa nakai," (which really has no meaning) where he apparently means "Sō omowanai ka," or possibly "Sō omowanai kai." There were a few other spots where the Japanese seems a little forced or simply gratuitous, but for the most part it's a good chance to check your comprehension and pick up some new phrases.

Shoshaman

A Tale of Corporate Japan

Arai Shinya, translated by Chieko Mulhern.
 Berkeley: University of California Press, 1991. 224 pages, $35.00 (cloth), $12.95 (paper).

This novel (originally published in Japanese as Kigyōka Sarariiman) won't be found in the bibliography of Michael Crichton's Rising Sun. Written by Arai Shinya, a director of Sumitomo Corporation and intended for a Japanese audience, it gives an honest and insightful portrayal of the life of an employee of a shōsha, a large-scale Japanese trading company.

Like Rising Sun, the plot of Shoshaman revolves around the buyout of an American company by the Japanese, but unlike the American book, there are no Japanese conspiracies to take over America and no mysterious murders, only one man trying to decide what is best for his company and for himself.

The main character, Nakasato Michio, works for Nissei Corporation as a middle-level manager. Nakasato, whose rapid promotion so far has virtually guaranteed him a spot in senior management, is entrusted with the decision of whether Nissei should buy a chain of restaurants in the U.S. Past experience convinces Nakasato that shōsha lack the entrepreneurial spirit necessary to successfully operate retail businesses. He also knows that if he approves the buyout, he will be transferred to America, damaging his chances for promotion. Nakasato is initially against the project, but encounters with three people from his past cause him to reconsider whether the conservative shōsha lifestyle is sufficiently fulfilling. Shoshaman is an excellent source of information for anyone interested in Japanese business. Instead of the innuendo in Crichton's book, this novel provides a realistic view of the inside operations of a shōsha. It illustrates how the human element influences many critical decisions, and makes the reader aware of the frustrations and doubts that many shōsha-men feel about their careers.

Unfortunately, as a novel Shoshaman is flawed. The dialogue and descriptions often seem more appropriate for an annual report than for a novel. This makes the characters seem shallow and superficial in places, and the simple plot has trouble sustaining the reader's interest. However, for those interested in gaining insights about Japanese businessmen as people, this novel serves as an insightful counterpoint to the image promoted by books like Rising Sun.

D.C. Palter is fiction editor for the Abiko Quarterly Rag.

Asia to your door... Welcome to Asia Book Club.

Join the Club that offers its members English-language books and tapes by and about Asians, Asian-Americans, and Asia – without the sales taxes of bookstores or domestic shipping charges of mail order houses.

That's because we're not just another business: we're a club that cares deeply about its members and Asia.

So you pay less for the books you want.

To see what we offer, call, fax, or send for the next issue of The ABC Review. More than a catalog, it features articles about the people creating new works about Asia.

Asia Book Club:

"Your guide to ideas & Asia."

Please send me the next copy of The ABC Review. It's free; I'm under no obligation; and my name won't be sold to any lists.

Asia Book Club

4811 Stelton Road - Suite 7

S. Plainfield, NJ 07080-1106

Order line: 908-668-5916 FAX: 908-668-8575

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Japanese on the 386PC - Kanji386!

The Kanji386 system software, developed by Sanyo Electric Corp., provides the official AX bilingual U.S. & Japanese operating system for running over 1,000 Japanese software programs on 80386-based AT compatible PCs. Endorsed and promoted in Japan by over 650 Japanese hardware, peripheral, and software companies, Kanji386 supports Ichitaro V4.0, Lotus 1-2-3J R2.2J, Netware386J, Excel for Windows 3.0J, Pagemaker 3.0J/SE, and other AX compatible applications. Requires an 80386SX or better CPU, VGA, 2MB RAM.

Bilingual DOS Version

Kanji386 Fonts & Drivers, AX Bilingual MS-DOS 5.0J, VJE-β FEP ($249.00)

Bilingual DOS & Windows Version

Kanji386 Fonts & Drivers, AX MS-Windows 3.0J, AX Bilingual MS-DOS 5.0J, VJE-β FEP ($399.00)

*Shipping Extra. 30 day refund policy if Kanji386 is not compatible with your PC.

By the AX Support Center at Pacific Software Publishing, Inc.
 2737 77th Ave. SE, Ste. 210, Mercer Island, WA 98040
 Tel: (206)232-3989 Fax: (206)236-8102

Business Books

A compendium of books about Japanese business, economics, and industry

Cultural Analysis/Doing Business

The Japanese Mind: The Goliath Explained, Robert C. Christopher. New York: Fawcett Columbine, 1983. 352 pages. A very readable appraisal of Japan and the Japanese. With clarity, balance, and personal anecdotes, Christopher briefly touches on almost every conceivable aspect of Japanese life.

Hidden Differences: Doing Business With the Japanese, Edward T. Hall and Mildred Reed Hall. Garden City, NY: Anchor Press/Doubleday, 1987. 172 pages. Renowned cultural anthropologist Edward Hall delivers a straightforward and fascinating examination of the unstated rules of Japanese-American business relations.

Gaishi: The Foreign Company in Japan, T.W. Kang. New York: Basic Books, 1990. 279 pages. Kang, an experienced insider, shows other companies what they need to know about Japanese business culture, providing insights into the idiosyncrasies of the Japanese business environment.

Going To Japan on Business: A Quick Guide To Protocol, Travel, & Language, Christalyn Brannen. Berkeley, CA: Stone Bridge Press, 1991. 84 pages. Cultural insights mixed with practical information to make the adjustment easier. Pocket sized.

With Respect to the Japanese: A Guide for Americans, John C. Condon. Yarmouth, ME: Intercultural Press, 1984. 92 pages. A valuable guide for anyone who wants to understand the critical elements of Japanese culture which affect the way Japanese and Americans interact in both business and social situations.

From Bonsai to Levi's, George Fields. New York: Mentor Books, 1983. 244 pages. An unprecedented guide to the complexities of Japanese consumer behavior, explaining what Western companies need to do to penetrate the Japanese consumer market.

How to Do Business with the Japanese: A Strategy for Success, Mark Zimmerman. New York: Random House, 1985. 316 pages.

Japan: The Fragile Superpower, Frank Gibney. Tokyo: Charles E. Tuttle. 273 pages.

Japanese Business Etiquette: A Practical Guide to Success with the Japanese, Diana Rowland. New York: Warner Books, 1985. 176 pages.

Labor Pains and the Gaijin Boss: Hiring, Managing and Firing the Japanese, Thomas J. Nevins. Tokyo: Japan Times, 1985. 293 pages.

The Unspoken Way: Haragei, or The Role of Silent Communication in Japanese Business and Society, Michihiro Matsumoto. New York: Kodansha, 1988. 200 pages.

Inside Corporate Japan: The Art of Fumble-Free Management, David J. Lu. Tokyo: Charles E. Tuttle, 1987. 246 pages.

Start of Learning 8:15	Time of Learning 0:05	Browsing Delay 0:00
K&K 57 JIS 2476	Readings	Meanings
三五 口	GO kata(ru) kata(rau)	word talk, relate converse
Area K&K 1 - 100	Notes on Readings	Notes on Meanings
大 大		RADICAL FOR SPEECH IS ON LEFT

MacSUNRISE Script

NEW RELEASE 2.0

Japanese kanji-learning software for HyperCard

Readings, meanings, compounds, pronunciations, note windows, stroke orders, finder, browser, and new customizer for saving kanji in any order or combination.

100 kanji: $99 • 500 kanji: $249 • 2,000 kanji: $499
demo disk: $5

STONE BRIDGE PRESS, P.O. Box 8208, BERKELEY, CA 94707
TEL 510-524-8732 • FAX 510-524-8711

ASIAN LANGUAGE SOFTWARE

JAPANESE, CHINESE, KOREAN

South Asian, Middle Eastern, European

and other languages

Multilingual Software & Programming for 數據管理、翻譯、文字處理

桌上出版、排版、教學

Data Management Translation
Word Processing
Desktop Publishing
Typesetting
Training

情報処理、翻訳、ワード・プロセッシング
デスクトップ・パブリッシング
タイプセッティング、養成

Pacific Rim Connections, Inc.

1838 El Camino Real, Suite #109
Burlingame, California 94010, USA
Phone (415) 697-0911
FAX (415) 697-9439

Call Toll Free 1-800-745-0911

Negotiation

Smart Bargaining: Doing Business with the Japanese, John L. Graham and Yoshi Sanno. New York: Harper Business, 1989 (revised edition). 212 pages. Graham and Sanno provide practical insights into commercial negotiations to help Americans establish and maintain productive relationships with Japanese clients, partners, and suppliers.

The Japanese Negotiator: Subtlety and Strategy Beyond Western Logic, Robert M. March. New York: Kodansha International, 1988. 197 pages.

Getting Your Yen's Worth: How to Negotiate with Japan, Inc., Robert T. Moran. Houston: Gulf Publishing, 1985. 181 pages.

Critical Analysis

Shadows of the Rising Sun: A Critical View of the "Japanese Miracle," Jared Taylor. Tokyo: Charles E. Tuttle, 1983. 336 pages. Taylor, born and raised in Japan, analyzes Japanese society with a fresh, critical persuasiveness, explaining both how and why the Japanese work, and identifying underlying patterns of thinking and behavior which permeate all facets of Japanese life.

Trading Places: How America Allowed Japan to Take the Lead, Clyde V. Prestowitz, Jr. Tokyo: Charles E. Tuttle, 1988. 367 pages. Prestowitz argues that because America has failed to respond adequately to the Japanese challenge, the power of the United States and the quality of American life is diminishing rapidly.

The Enigma of Japanese Power: People and Politics in a Stateless Nation, Karel van Wolffren. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1989. 495 pages. Veteran journalist van Wolffren questions what he feels is a pervasive illusion—that Japan is a pluralistic system with an effective free-market economy.

YEN! Japan's New Financial Empire and Its Threat to America, Daniel Burstein. New York: Fawcett Columbine, 1990. 357 pages. Burstein contends that Japan has taken advantage of irresponsible U.S. economic policies to create a financial juggernaut which forces the U.S. to bend to the influence of the world's largest creditor nation.

Agents of Influence: How Japan Manipulates America's Political and Economic System, Pat Choate. New York: Touchstone, 1990. 307 pages. Choate contends that Japan is running an ongoing political campaign in America, spending vast sums of money paying off influential Americans to achieve political domination over the United States.

The Reckoning, David Halberstam. New York: Avon Books, 1986. 786 pages. Novel-like analysis of Japan's ascent and America's subtle industrial decline. Halberstam compares Ford and Nissan to show how America's auto industry fooled itself, its workers, and its public.

The Japanese Power Game: What It Means for America, William J. Holstein. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1990. 339 pages.

More Like Us: Putting America's Native Strengths and Traditional Values to Work to Overcome the Asian Challenge, James Fallows. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1989. 245 pages.

The Sun Also Sets: The Limits of Japan's Economic Power, Bill Emmott. New York: Touchstone Books, 1991. 292 pages.

Japanese Takeovers: The Global Contest for Corporate Control, W. Carl Kester. Boston: Harvard Business School Press, 1991. 298 pages.

Zaibatsu America: How Japanese Firms Are Colonizing Vital U.S. Industries, Robert L. Kearns. New York: The Free Press, 1992. 256 pages.

Working for the Japanese: Inside Mazda's American Auto Plant, Joseph J. Fucini and Suzy Fucini. New York: The Free Press, 1990. 258 pages.

Business Strategy

Head To Head: The Coming Economic Battle Among Japan, Europe, and America, Lester Thurow. New York: William Morrow, 1992. 335 pages. One of America's most influential economists says the most decisive war of the century is being waged right now, and the United States may already have decided to lose.

Kaisha: The Japanese Corporation, James C. Abegglen and George Stalk, Jr. New York: Basic Books, 1985. 309 pages. How marketing, money, and manpower strategy, not management style, make the Japanese world pace-setters.

Triad Power: The Coming Shape of Global Competition, Kenichi Ohmae. New York: The Free Press, 1985. 220 pages. Why corporations hoping to compete in the global arena must become "insiders" in what Ohmae calls the Triad: Europe, Japan, and the United States.

The Third Century: America's Resurgence in the Asian Era, Joel Kotkin and Yoriko Kishimoto. New York: Crown Publishers, 1988. 286 pages.

Second to None: American Companies in Japan, Robert C. Christopher. New York: Crown Publishers, 1986. 258 pages.

モ ケ

日 本 語 ワ ー ブ
□

MOKE 2.1 enables anyone with an IBM PC or compatible computer, a hard drive, and a graphics monitor to enter Japanese. Japanese is entered via romaji. MOKE 2.1 can input hiragana, katakana, kanji, and ASCII. Japanese can be printed on Postscript printers, HP LaserJet II, and 9, 24-pin Epson compatible dot matrix printers.

Also available: Kanji Guess 1.0 with flashcard, multiple guess, Kanji fish, and GojuuOnjun quizzes.

- MOKE 2.1 — $69.95
- Kanji Guess 1.0 — $30.00

Additional $5.00 per copy for shipping and handling in the U.S. (Outside the U.S. and Canada add $10.00 each.)

Please check one format:

- 5 1/4 (360K) 3 1/2 (720K)

KiCompWare

Payment made by: Check or money order
 MasterCard VISA TOTAL $ _____
 Acct. # _____ Exp. Date _____
 Signature: _____

Send to: KiCompWare, 1812 N. Erb St., Appleton, WI 54911 ☎ 414-832-1222

1 Calvin: "Mom, will you drive me into town?"
 ママ、町 まで 乗せてってこない? (PL2)
 Mama machi made nosetette kurenai
 Mom town to/as far as drive me (emph.)

- nosetette is a contraction of nosete itte, combining the -te forms of noseru ("carry in/on [a vehicle] → convey by car") and iku ("go"). The -te form + iku indicates that the action moves away from the speaker in some sense, so nosetette means "take (me/her/them) by car."
- kurenai is the negative form of kureru ("give to me/us" or "do for me/us"). The -te form + kurenai makes an informal request, "won't you (do this for me)?"

2 Mom: "Why should I drive you, Calvin? It's a perfect day outside!"
 なぜ車 なの? こんなに いい 天気 なのに。 (PL2)
 Naze kuruma na no Konna ni ii tenki na no ni why car (explan.-?) this much/such good/nice weather when it is

- spoken with a rising intonation, na no after a noun asks for an explanation even without the question endings ka/desu ka.
- na no ni = "even though/in spite of the fact that . . ." This is left implicit in the English, but is generally specified in Japanese.
- Japanese do not normally say ii hi (lit. "good/nice day") to refer to the weather, so "a perfect day outside" must be changed to konna-ni ii tenki ("such good/nice weather"). A more literal soto wa subarashii tenki ("wonderful perfect weather outside") would also be acceptable, but konna ni ii tenki seems more natural.

3 Mom: "What do you think people have feet for?"
 足 は 何 の ため に ある と 思っ て る の? (PL2)
 Ashi wa nan no tame ni aru to omotte-ru no feet/legs as-for what of for purpose have (quote) think (explan.-?)

- nan no tame ni = "for what purpose" → "what for?"
- ashi in Japanese can be either "legs" or "feet."
- aru is literally "exist(s)," but one of its most common uses is "exist in one's possession" → "have."

4 Calvin: "To work the gas pedal."
 アクセル を 踏む ため さ。 (PL2)
 Akuseru o fumu tame sa gas pedal (obj.) step on purpose (emph.)

- akuseru is the standard Japanese word for "gas pedal," a shortened katakana rendering of the English "accelerator."
- akuseru o fumu is a complete thought/sentence ("step on/press the gas pedal") modifying tame ("purpose") → "for the purpose of stepping on the gas pedal" → "to work the gas pedal."
- sa is an emphatic particle that often has the feeling of "of course/it goes without saying that . . ." It occurs only in informal speech, not in PL3-4 speech.

The Essential Calvin and Hobbes, copyright © 1988 Universal Press Syndicate. The Authoritative Calvin and Hobbes, copyright © 1990, Universal Press Syndicate. All rights reserved. Reprinted/translated by permission of Editors Press Service, N.Y.

1 Calvin: "Quick Mom! Aliens just landed in the back yard! They demand to talk to you!"
 急いでママ! 宇宙人が裏庭に降りてきているよ! ママと話したいって! (PL2)
Isoide Mama Uchū-jin ga uraniwa ni orite kite-ru yo Mama to hanashi-tai tte hurry Mom space-people (subj.) backyard into have come down (emph) Mom/you with want to talk (quote)

- isoide is the -te form of isogu ("hurry/rush"). The -te form of a verb is often used in informal speech to make a request or give a gentle command.
- orite is the -te form of oriru ("descend"), and kite-ru is a contraction of kite-iru ("has/have come," from kuru, "come"). The more technical term for "land (an aircraft)," 着陸する chakuriku suru, is used colloquially, too, but it doesn't seem natural in this case.
- Japanese speakers tend to use their listener's name or title (in this case Mama) when English speakers would use "you." (Or, when "you" is implicit, they use nothing at all.) In fact anata ("you") is taboo in many cases, and a child would never use it with his parents.
- hanashi-tai is the "want to" form of hanasu ("talk/speak"), and -te is a colloquial equivalent of the quotative to, so hanashi-tai tte is literally "they say they want to talk/speak." Trying to put in a verb to correspond with "demand" would make the Japanese sound clumsy.

2 Calvin: "You go on out! I'll guard the cookies in the kitchen!"
 さ、早く行って! 台所のクッキーはぼくが見張ってるから。 (PL2)
Sa hayaku itte Daidokoro no kukkii wa boku ga mihatte-ru kara come on quickly go kitchen in cookies as-for I/me (subj.) will be guarding because/so

- sa (or sā) is often used at the beginning of a sentence when urging someone to action.
- itte is the -te form of iku ("go"), again being used as a request/command.
- mihatte-ru is a contraction of mihatte-iru ("be/will be guarding") from miharu ("guard").

3 Calvin: "Quick! Hurry!"
 急いで! 早く! (PL2)
Isoide Hayaku
 (please) hurry quickly

4 Calvin: "She's not buying this."
 乗ってこないな。 (PL2)
Notte konai na
 get on board/ride not come (colloq.)

Mom: "Calvin, just how dumb do you think I am?"
 カルヴィン、ママがそんなまぬけだと思いの?
Karvin Mama ga sonna manuke da to omou no
 Calvin I/me (subj.) that much dumb am (quote) think (explan.-?)

- notte is the -te form of noru, which literally means "get on/get on board/ride," but is also used to mean "be deceived/be drawn into." Konai is the negative form of kuru ("come").
- na is an equivalent of the colloquial ne ("it is, isn't it/you do, don't you/right?). It is universally used in place of ne when thinking/speaking to oneself, but mostly used only by males in actual conversation.
- sonna means "that kind of," or, when used as a contraction of vonna-ni, "that much."
- manuke can be either an adjective or a noun ("dumb/dumbbell"), so sonna manuke can mean either "that dumb" or "that much of a dumbbell."
- asking a question with no, which indicates an explanation is being sought, is common in colloquial speech. The Japanese sentence literally says "Do you think I'm that dumb?"

(continued from page 14)

Crichton seems unconcerned that the impressive non-fiction sources in his bibliography have also been criticized for mixing factual analysis with their own exaggerated visions of Japan's plot to systematically dismantle American industry and control the United States.

The reader will recognize ideas, assertions, and theories Crichton has culled from writings of three of the so-called "gang of four" Japan-bashers: Karel van Wolfren from his book The Enigma of Japanese Power, James Fallows from his The Atlantic magazine articles "Containing Japan" and "Getting Along with Japan," and Clyde Prestowitz, Jr. from his book Trading Places: How We Are Giving Our Future to Japan and How to Reclaim It. (Chalmers Johnson, the other member, is left out of the bibliography but his spirit is in evidence.) But Crichton's main source is the pre-eminent conspiracy advocate Pat Choate, whose Agents of Influence has been criticized as one part insightful analysis and on-target condemnation of influence peddling, but two parts paranoid fantasy about how Tokyo allegedly uses massive payoffs to influential Americans to achieve economic and political dominance.

Crichton claims he draws from "factual" sources, but the mini-lectures and diatribes his characters deliver use questionable trade and investment statistics to "prove" Japan's plot to dominate the U.S. When characters announce that "overall foreign investment in Japan has declined in the last ten years"; or that the Japanese "have seventy, seventy-five percent of Los Angeles"; or that "the Japanese spend a half a billion a year in Washington"; or that "if Americans send beef [to Japan] it will rot on the docks"; or that "America has done nothing" in the last twenty years to lower the energy cost of finished goods—all assertions that would be questioned by anyone who reads the Wall Street Journal—readers should realize that Crichton is mixing fact and fantasy.

Although Crichton's economic assertions are mostly flawed, the questions he has Smith put to the Japanophile Connor often offer valuable insight into cultural differences. When Smith becomes highly agitated as he senses that a Japanese representative from Nakamoto is blatantly lying, Connor explains the Japanese tendency toward situationally-based behavior: "It's annoying. But you see Ishigura takes a different view. Now that he is beside the mayor he sees himself in another context, with another set of obligations and requirements for his behavior. Since he's so sensitive to context, he's able to act differently with no reference to earlier behavior. To us, he seems like a different person. But Ishigura just feels he's being appropriate. You consider him immoral. He considers you naive. Because for Japanese consistent behavior is not possible."

Similar cultural insights abound. Connor describes the Japanese penchant for indirectness and saving face: "If someone in Japan is unhappy with you, they never tell you to your face. They tell your friend, your associate, your boss. So be-

(continued on page 51)

IBM®-COMPATIBLE COMPUTER SOFTWARE

日本語を書く／読む／話す ためのソフトウェア

To Enhance Your Japanese Language Capability
To Help You Learn Japanese

EZ JAPANESE WRITER™
The Software Which Makes Writing in Japanese as Easy as Typing in English

$1,200

イージー・ジャパニーズライター
You can compose Japanese sentences by typing English. The software provides basic translation. You can directly input/edit Japanese sentences. You can use it as a Japanese word processor with a built-in English-to-Japanese dictionary.

EZ JAPANESE READER™
The Software Which Makes Reading in Japanese as Easy as Listening in English

$300
$700

イージー・ジャパニーズリーダー
The software converts a Japanese sentence with Kanji/Hiragana/Katakana to either a Hiragana/Katakana sentence or Romaji only (Japanese written by Roman alphabet) sentence or both. Also, the software will provide corresponding English words for most of Japanese words.

EZ JAPANESE SPEAKER™
The Software Which Helps You Speak Japanese

$125

イージー・ジャパニーズスピーカー
The software pronounces Hiragana/Katakana sentences. You can choose the speaking speed. When used in conjunction with EZ JapaneseReader, you can listen to the spoken Kanji/Hiragana. The output Japanese sound is through a SoundAdapter (comes with the software) connected to parallel printer port.

EJ Bilingual Inc.

A Joint Venture by Nippon Text Co., Ltd. and Kimihira & Taylor Associates, Inc.
2463 Torrance Blvd., Torrance CA 90501
Phone: (310)320-8139 Fax: (310)320-3228

Call (310) 320-1438 to hear
EZ JapaneseSpeaker™ Demo
(24 hours a day)

EZ JapaneseWriter, EZ JapaneseReader and EZ JapaneseSpeaker are pending trademark of EJ Bilingual, Inc.
IBM® is a registered trademark of International Business Machines Corp.

CompuServe and Japan

CompuServe, based in Columbus Ohio, is one of the largest providers of online information services in the world today. Started in 1979 with only 1,200 members in the Ohio area, CompuServe now boasts almost one million members in 100 countries.

In case you're not familiar with the concept of CompuServe, imagine a network of computers in your office or school with basic features such as electronic mail, file transfer ability and so on. Now imagine a much larger network with a wide range of features including an electronic shopping center, live electronic conferencing, interactive games, financial services, customer service forums for most major hardware and software vendors and a complete reference library including a news clipping service and a regularly updated encyclopedia. And, instead of swapping files with the guy down the hall, imagine that you're trading quips with people in Tokyo, San Francisco, Paris, New York, London and Seoul.

CompuServe is non-hardware specific; people using Macs, Amigas or NeXT machines can access the service just as easily as those using IBMs or compatibles. The command language is similar to BASIC, and is fairly easy to use and remember. Simple commands such as "GO," "FIND" or "CHOICES" can get you almost anywhere you want to be.

In 1987, CompuServe signed an agreement with the Nissho Iwai Corporation and Fujitsu Limited to offer a version of CompuServe in Japan. This service, called "NiftyServe," has attracted more than 350,000 users since its inception. NiftyServe is connected to CompuServe through an international gateway; while it is possible for NiftyServe and CompuServe users to converse, one of them must be a member of both services. Gateways have also been established with other countries, including Germany, England, Canada and Switzerland. CompuServe is also expanding its membership base in countries throughout the Pacific Rim, including Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Singapore, New Zealand and Australia.

This international subscriber base adds a new dimension to the online forums. Forums (electronic communities of people who share common interests) cover subjects from astronomy to desktop publishing to human sexuality. There are currently more than 300 forums, including 180 devoted to specific hardware and software vendors. While there are no forums dedicated specifically to Japan, there are a number which offer Japan-related message sections and libraries.

For those interested in the Japanese language, there's the Foreign Language Education Forum (GO FLEFO). This forum contains both a message board and library devoted to all the East Asian languages, including Japanese, Chinese and Korean. A quick look through the message center reveals message threads (chains of related messages grouped by a single topic) covering subjects like Japanese business cards, Shinjo, working in Japan, KanjiTalk & System 7 and DOS/V & WordPerfect. A look at the library reveals several downloadable files, including word processors and character editors (shareware and freeware), broadcast schedules for Radio Japan, a debate on Japan's scorn for Americans (inspired by an article in the L.A. Times) and a WordPerfect 5.1 macro for kana/romaji conversions.

For a more cultural focus, there's the Travel Special Interest Group (GO TRAVSIG). In section 10, "Asia," you'll come across messages about moving to Japan, the Gion Matsuri (a festival in Kyoto), and using your computer in Japan. The library contains files on the Japanese way of death, the Shitamachi Museum in Tokyo, vending machines and Japanese social drinking habits.

For people interested in the business scene, there's the PR & Marketing Special Interest Group (GO PRSIG). Their message section, "International," and libraries, "Electronic Seminars" and "Intelnet," offer a wide range of information on Japan. The message section covers topics such as doing business in Japan and finding Japanese contacts, while the libraries offer items like a 100-page seminar on Japan, a list of Japanese companies and organizations, a speech on catalog sales in Japan, and a report on the unique marketing environment in Japan. Another forum focusing on business is the International Entrepreneur's Network (GO USEN). It contains much of the same types of information, but geared more toward a small businessman's viewpoint.

If your tastes run toward manga and anime, there's the Comics Forum (GO COMIC). It offers general information on manga and anime, plot synopses, and plenty of pictures of your favorite characters.

CompuServe is an impressive service; if you want to meet people with similar interests, or expand your knowledge of Japan (or almost any other subject), it's a good investment. For more information on Nifty-Serve, contact NiftyServe in Tokyo at 0120-22-1200.

For more information on joining CompuServe, contact MANGAJIN, Tel. 404-634-2276, Fax 404-634-1799.

Brett Pawlowski, MANGAJIN Business Manager, is also our resident computer whiz.

Lesson 18 • Informal “Politeness”

As we always mention in the MANGAJIN warning about “Politeness Levels,” the word “politeness” is really just a convenient simplification. There are actually several dimensions involved in “polite speech.” For example, certain verbs are inherently honorific, and are used to show respect for, or deference toward, another person, but the endings of these verbs (which are a primary factor in the MANGAJIN system of “politeness levels”), are really more a function of the formality of the situation. This can lead to situations in which it’s hard to know exactly which of MANGAJIN’s four politeness levels is appropriate. In this lesson we look at a few such situations.

Our first three examples show informal usage of the verb nasaru, an honorific equivalent of the ordinary verb suru, meaning “do.” Because it’s honorific, nasaru is used only for the actions of others, never one’s own actions. It indicates that you feel respect for the other person. When translating into English, it is almost impossible to make a distinction between suru and nasaru (except by using phrasing that might convey the tone somehow), but they are two different words that convey a very different feeling in Japanese.

Beginning students usually first encounter nasaru in its -masu form, nasaimasu. In MANGAJIN, nasaimasu is classified as PL4, the highest level. To convey the same meaning in what we call PL3, typically one would replace the honorific nasaimasu with shimasu, the PL3 form of suru. Suru, the plain abrupt form, is a clear case of PL2, but how do you rank nasaru? It still shows respect, and is clearly more “polite” than suru, so it wouldn’t be right to call it PL2, but it’s not really PL3 or PL4 either. Our manga examples illustrate this kind of dilemma in assigning politeness levels.

A traditional wife

Her husband has come home early so she knows something is wrong. Instead of the common PL2 expression Dō shita no?, she asks him Dō nasatta no?, substituting the honorific verb nasaru for the neutral verb suru. As you can see in the second frame where she is taking his coat, she shows the traditional respect for, or perhaps deference to, her husband. But they are husband and wife, and this is obviously an informal situation, so she uses the plain/abrupt past form, nasatta, instead of the more formal nasaimashita.

Observing the traditional social hierarchy in this way is considered a sign of good breeding or refinement. In fact, women’s use of such “polite” words can often be more a matter of refinement than of respect — e.g., when they are speaking among themselves.

Husband: ただいま
Tadaima
just now
“I’m home.”

Wife: あら。あなた、どうなさったの？
Ara. Anata, dō nasatta no
(exclam.) you/“dear” what’s wrong
“My goodness! What’s wrong, Dear?”

Husband: ちょっと 風邪をひいた ようだ。
Chotto kaze o hiita yō da a little caught cold it seems that “I seem to have caught a little cold.”

Wife: そう...
So...
“Really?”

© Yamasaki & Kitami / Tsuri-Baka Nisshi, Shogakukan

Feminine deference

A middle-aged salary-man, Nishimura-san, meets Natsuko, the daughter of a professor, at a mountain resort. Since they don't know each other very well, they both use primarily PL3 (-masu/desu) speech, but because of the informal setting, some PL2 is mixed in too.

As a sign of feminine deference, she uses the honorific verb nasaru (sukoshi mo nasaranai) rather than the neutral verb suru (sukoshi mo shinai), but she uses the plain abrupt form, nasaranai, rather than the more formal nasaimasen.

© Saigan Ryohei / San-chōme no Yūhi, Shogakukan

Natsuko: だけどご自分の話は、少しもなさらないのね。 dakedo go-jibun no hanashi wa sukoshi mo nasaranai no ne but (hon.) self of talk as-for even a little don't do (?) do you “But you don't talk about yourself at all, do you?”

- sukoshi mo followed by a negative verb means that the action (talking) occurs “not even a little/ not at all.”

Deference/respect for royalty

The young king has developed a tumor on his forehead and is in such intense pain that he cannot eat, sleep, or even lie still. The court physician, Jiiwaka, suggests removing it surgically, but Buddha relieves the pain with the touch of his finger. As an older, respected member of the court, Jiiwaka uses mostly informal speech forms, but as a sign of respect for the king, he uses the honorific verb nasaru (jitto nasatte-ru) instead of the neutral verb suru (jitto shite-ru).

© Tezuka Productions / Buddha

Jiiwaka: 信じられん...陛下が心地よさそうに目をつむられてじっとなさってる
shinjiraren heika ga kokochi yosasō ni me o tsumurarete jitto nasatte-ru can't believe His Majesty (subj.) appears to be comfortably eyes (obj.) closed-and is being still (hon.)
“I can't believe it... His Majesty appears comfortable, lying still with his eyes shut.”

- shinjiraren is an informal masculine form of shinjirarenai (“cannot believe”), the plain negative form of shinjirareru (“can believe”), from the verb shinjiru (“believe”).
- kokochi yoi means “comfortable/pleasant,” and kokochi yosasō is used to indicate that someone else appears to be comfortable.
- tsumurarete is also honorific — an honorific -te form of tsumuru, “close (one's) eyes.” This is identical to the passive form of the verb.

The “polite” verb itadaku: students generally encounter this word first as itadakimasu, the “thanks” said before partaking of a meal or beverage. It means “receive/partake of/have done on one’s behalf,” but it’s a humble word, implying that the receiver/partaker is of a lower or subordinate status. The verb morau has the same meaning, but implies that both parties are equal, or that the receiver is of higher status. In the following two examples, women are shown using itadaku in a way which, although certainly not limited to females, gives an air of refinement to feminine speech.

Feminine and refined, but informal

Buying a watch: this woman is the customer, so social hierarchy certainly does not dictate that she use polite/humble speech. Her use of the humble word itadaku (instead of the neutral word morau) gives an air of refinement, but she uses the informal form, itadaku, instead of the more formal itadakimasu. The honorific o- before ikura also adds to the air of refinement.

© Takeda & Takai / Pro Golfer, Shogakukan

Woman: そう... いい感じ ね、 Sō ii kanji ne
 that's so/really good feel/effect/impression(colloq.)
“Really . . . It seems nice.”

いただく わ おいくら？
Itadaku wa o-ikura
 (I'll) receive/take (it) (fem.) (hon.) how much
“I'll take it. How much?”

- her initial sō (“That’s so”) is in response to the clerk’s explanation about the merits of this watch, i.e. she is agreeing that it is light and has a nice design.

From Urusei Yatsura: Oyuki, the princess of Neptune, traveled through a fourth dimensional passageway to the room of “ordinary” high school student Ataru. She is leaving now and asks if someone won’t escort her back. As a princess among ordinary humans, she is free to use whatever speech forms she likes, but using the humble word itadakenai (okutte itadakenai) instead of the neutral moraenai (okutte moraenai) gives a feminine, refined touch. Because of the informal setting and the social status of the others present, however, she uses itadakenai instead of the more formal itadakemasen.

© Takahashi Rumiko / Urusei Yatsura, Shogakukan

Oyuki: 送っていただけませんかしら！
Okutte itadakenai kashira can't have (someone) take/escort (me) (I) wonder “I wonder if I couldn't have someone accompany me.”

Ataru: はいっ！
Hai!
 sure/all right
“Sure!”

- itadakenai is the plain/abrupt negative of itadakeru (“can receive/can have done”), which is the potential form of itadaku (“receive/have done”).

Chivalrous? use of polite speech

At a pro golf tournament, her hat was blown off by a strong gust of wind just as he was making a shot. The ball goes in the hat, which, carried by the wind, deposits the ball right on the green. He returns the hat to her, and she apologizes for interfering with his game. He reassures her, and then takes the opportunity to ask for her phone number.

As you might guess from the golf tee that he carries in his mouth, Typhoon is a laid-back type who generally uses informal (PL2) speech. Here, he first says tasukete moratta, and he could have said Denwa bangō o oshiete moraitai, but by ending with a more “polite” or honorific word in its plain form, he implies that he is a gentleman while maintaining his casual identity.

© Takahashi & Kazama / Dr. Tuijin JR, Futabasha

Dr. Typhoon: いやワタシの方こそあなたにたすけてもらったのだ
Iya watashi no hō koso anata ni tasukete moratta no da no my side (emph.) you by received saving/help? (emph.)
 “No, I’m the one who was helped by you.”

ぜひ電話番号を教えてください
Zehi denwa bangō o oshiete itadakitai definitely phone number (obj.) want to receive your telling “I definitely would like to have you tell me your phone number.”
 ▶ “Won’t you please tell me your phone number?”

Woman: でも...
demo
 “But...”

For more information

敬語 keigo, “polite speech,” is undeniably one of the most difficult aspects of becoming fully proficient in Japanese. It’s nice to know that you are “safe” in most situations if you stick to the PL3 desu-masu endings — you’re unlikely to offend anyone too badly — but you can never aspire to “natural” Japanese unless you are ready to tackle polite speech. This is the area where language and culture become almost inseparable. For those who are ready to push their politeness skills to a new level, here are some recent books that should help.

- Minimum Essential Politeness: A Guide to the Japanese Honorific Language, by Agnes M. Niyekawa (Kodansha International, 1991). This is a practical book, offering not only a clear explanation of all the factors that must be considered to establish the appropriate level of politeness but also presenting handy charts of the most important words and forms and step-by-step guides for learning the complex system (what to learn first in order to avoid the worst rudeness; what to learn next to refine your politeness).
- How to Be Polite in Japanese, by Osamu Mizutani and Nobuko Mizutani (The Japan Times, 1987), is similar in offering an analysis of the system and charts of the most important words and forms. It also discusses such practical matters as what not to talk about, non-verbal expressions of politeness, and a number of specific interactive situations.
- Formal Expressions for Japanese Interaction, edited by staff of the Inter-University Center for Japanese Language Studies (The Japan Times, 1991). This is an exercise-filled textbook, with accompanying tapes, rather than a systematic presentation of honorific speech as such. From one lesson to the next, foreign student David Smith interacts with Japanese of widely varied ages and status. The exercises give students practice not only in honorific forms but in other aspects of usage, such as indirect speech, that affect politeness. This one is designed to be used with a teacher.

1

Narration: 女の子はみんな...
Onna no ko wa minna girl(s) as-for all/everyone Girls all...

Name tag: のりこ
Noriko

2

Narration: 2つや3つの呼び名をもっている
Futatsu ya mitsu no yobina o motte-iru two and/or three of name(s) (obj.) have have two or three nicknames. (PL2)

Voices: のりこ / のんちゃん / のりピー
Nokko / Non-chan / Noripii

Noriko: ハーイ
Ha-i

• motte-iru is from motsu, "hold/have."

3

Narration: もちろんオバタリアンだって...
Mochiron Obatarian datte of course Obatarian also/as for Obatarian, of course...

Newspaper: ○○化粧品試供品送ります
Maru-maru keshōhin shikyōhin okurimasu blank-blank cosmetics sample will send ハガキで請求下さい

Hagaki de seikyū kudasai

postcard by request please

"We will send you a trial sample of XX Cosmetics. Please order by postcard." (PL3)

• okurimasu is the ordinary polite form of okuru, "to send."
 • seikyū (suru) = "request/claim/apply."

4

Narration: 10や20は...
jū ya ni-jū wa
(has) ten or twenty. (PL2)

Sound FX: ドサドサ

Dosa dosa (sound of many envelopes falling)

Postcards: Obata Chieko-sama Obata Keiko-sama
Obata Naoko-sama Obata Atsuko-sama
Obata Toshiko-sama Obata Kaori-sama
Obata Akiko-sama

Note: 同じ住所で名前だけ変えてる

Onaji jūsho de namae dake kaete-ru same address with name only changing

Changing only the name, with the same address. (PL2)

• the missing final verb, motte-iru ("have"), is implied.
 • Obata (小畑), a common surname that literally means "small field," is obviously a play on Obatarian.
 • -sama is an honorific suffix added to names, more polite than -san, but the standard for addressing mail.
 • kaete-(i)ru is from the verb kaeru, "change/alter." This would normally be preceded by the particle o, but particles are often omitted when dake is used.

©Hotta Katsuhiko. All rights reserved.

First published in Japan in 1989 by Take Shobo, Tokyo.
 English translation rights arranged through Take Shobo.

カップめん

Title: カップめん

Kappu men

cup noodles

Instant Noodles

- kappu men, combining a katakana rendering of English “cup” with men, the Japanese word for “noodles,” is the generic Japanese word for all kinds of instant noodles in a cup. As it happens, the very first such product was called Kappu Nūdoru, using a katakana rendering of English “noodle(s)” instead of the Japanese word.

1

First Man: おいっ 3分 はかっ てくれよ

Oi! Sanpun hakatte kure yo hey 3 minutes measure please (emph.)

“Hey, time three minutes for me, will you?”

(PL2)

Second Man: うん

Un

uh-huh/okay

“Sure.” (PL2)

- oi is a relatively rough way of getting someone’s attention: “Hey!”
- the counter suffix for minutes is -fun, but f changes to p for euphony in ippun (“one minute”), sanpun (“three minutes”), roppun (“six minutes”), happun (“eight minutes”), and juppun (“ten minutes”).
- hakatte is the -te form of hakaru (“measure”), and kure (from kureru, “give [to me/us]”) after the -te form of a verb makes an informal request or gentle command. Making a request/command with kure is masculine — though kureru can be used in other ways by either sex.

4

Second Man: あ 時計 が 止まっ てる

A tokei ga tomatte-ru

oh watch/clock (subj.) is stopped

“Oh, my watch has stopped.” (PL2)

- tokei refers to any kind of “timepiece,” including those worn around one’s wrist. In cases where you need to specify “watch,” you would say udedokei, literally “arm clock.” In the combination, tokei changes to dokei for euphony.
- tomatte-ru is a contraction of tomatte-iru, from tomaru (“stop”). iru after the -te form of a verb means either that the action is continuing or that the result of the action continues to be true. In this case it is the latter — “has stopped (and remains stopped).”
- the first man’s exaggerated reaction (flipping over and upsetting the table) is a slapstick device commonly seen in manga.

© Imazeki Shin, All rights reserved

First published in Japan in 1987 by Take Shobō, Tokyo

English translation rights arranged through Take Shobō.

(continued from page 3)

practised by the KKK or Aryan groups. I'm glad to know (as an Asian-Indian) that many Japanese are not racist but just do not think about other people's sensitive spots. Because they do not practise racism out of hatred, but ignorance does not excuse it, but makes me easier to know it's not out of spite.

HARITHA K. VEERAMASUNENI
Kalamazoo, MI

Frederik Schodt, now on a "wandering trip" around Japan to get ideas for his new book, was very pleased when we sent him a copy of this letter. -Ed.

Counter Points

The lesson on Counters and Classifiers in MANGAJIN No. 16 is most instructive and thorough, as in all other lessons.

However, there is one counter, not included in the list on page 19, that I have always been uncertain about. It is the word 例 (rei, used to count "examples," or "cases" in medical documents). Would you please tell me how to pronounce the counts from one case (一例) to ten cases (十例), in English or furigana? Can all counters beginning with ラ, リ, ル, レ or ロ be handled the same way?

T.W. CHU
Fort Washington, PA

John B. Ratliff III and Imai Yoshiko of Diplomatic Language Services, Inc., provided this reply:

To the dismay of the serious student of Japanese, there are no rules that will cover the reading/pronunciation of all counters and classifiers, and the numbers preceding them. However, most counters/classifiers are consistently read with Chinese numerals (onyomi). For example, -dai (counter for "vehicles") is read: ichi-dai, ni-dai, san-dai, etc.

There are also irregular types of counters/classifiers which begin with Japanese numerals (kunyomi) for the first few numbers, then switch to Chinese numerals (onyomi). For example, -ma (間, "room") is read: hito-ma, futa-ma, mi-ma, and then switches back to the onyomi: yo-ma, go-ma, etc.

To complicate matters, some counters/classifiers are read, depending on who is doing the reading, either way. For example, -rei (例, "case/example") is usually read: ichi-rei, ni-rei, san-rei, yon-rei, go-rei, roku-rei, nana-rei, hachi-rei, kyū-rei, jū-rei. There are, however, Japanese who would say hito-rei, futa-rei, then switch to the Japanese numerals, san-rei, yon-rei, etc., as above.

For a good basic treatment of counters/classifiers (and a handy memorization grid), refer to pp. 604-607 of A Dictionary of Basic Japanese Grammar, by Seiichi Makino and Michio Tsutsui (The Japan Times, 1989).

MANGAJIN welcomes your language-related questions, too.

日本語 科学技術用語漢字練習

Kanji-Flash-BTJ V1.0 Copyright Kanji Flash Softworks, 1991

Review of Scientific and Technical Japanese Vocabulary based on the book "BASIC TECHNICAL JAPANESE", H. Watanabe Press

Instructions	About Kanji Flash-BTJ	Change Options
Chapter 3: 136 Kanjiana	Chapter 14: 30 Kanji
Chapter 4: 152 Kanjiana	Chapters 16-14: 115 Kanji
Chapters 3-4: 230 Kanji	Chapter 15: 29 Kanji
Chapter 5: 28 Kanji	Chapter 16: 49 Kanji
Chapter 6: 28 Kanji	Chapter 17: 25 Kanji
Chapter 7: 28 Kanji	Chapter 18: 25 Kanji
Chapter 8: 28 Kanji	Chapters 19-18: 110 Kanji
Chapter 9: 28 Kanji	Chapter 19: 25 Kanji
Chapters 5-9: 108 Kanji	Chapter 20: 25 Kanji
Chapter 10: 28 Kanji	Chapters 19-20: 56 Kanji
Chapter 11: 28 Kanji	Basic Kanji : 305 Kanji
Chapter 12: 28 Kanji	Appendix C : 135 Kanji
Chapter 13: 25 Kanji	All Kanji : 516 Kanji

Quit and return to DOS
Use cursor keys to move and press ENTER to select

Easy-to-use, colorful, complete ...

日本人の科学技術英語習得にも有用です!

料

Material: 1) foaming connecting
2) buffer: 5
3) furnace, reactor

Enter letter of correct meaning.

... with 1000 single KANJI words ...

日本人の科学技術英語習得にも有用です!

縮性流体

Meaning: a) compression
b) safety
c) sulfuric acid, H₂SO₄
d) pressure vessel
e) compressible fluid

Enter letter of correct meaning.

... and 2438 KANJI compounds !!!

Scientists & Engineers !!!

Learn the 500 most common KANJI used in physics, chemistry, biology, and related engineering disciplines.

Equivalent to 4302 flashcards !!

Combines the proven effectiveness of flashcards with the seduction of a video display and a computer's flexibility.

Options allow

- Full testing • Pronunciation or meaning testing only • Viewing only • Adjustable retest frequency on missed words • Meanings tested by multiple choice or explicit entry • Saving missed words to disk for later retesting

A Flashcard Companion to the UW Press Textbook
Basic Technical Japanese

For PC-compatibles with VGA/EGA graphics
Both 5¼" & 3½" diskettes supplied Uses ordinary DOS system

In U.S., only $79 (+$2.50 S&H) for software

Or $99 (+$4.50 S&H) for software and textbook Quantity discounts available

Kanji-Flash Softworks

P.O. Box 3119, Gaithersburg, MD 20885-3119
☎ 301-279-2678 FAX: 301-279-2598
e-mail: 70530.704@CompuServe.com

Quality Software
at Reasonable Prices

In Japan: Brainy Institute

Tachibanadai 1-5-51, Midori-ku, Yokohama 227
☎ & FAX 045-962-3240
e-mail: NAG00435@NiftyServe.com

営業てんてこ日誌

Eigyō Tenteko Nisshi

作・牛次郎 story・Gyū Jirō

画・近藤洋助
art・Kondō Yōsuke

The title of this series does not lend itself to English translation. Eigyō means “business/operations,” but the eigyō-bu (bu = “department/division”) of a company is invariably the department in charge of sales. Tenteko is most often seen in the expression tenteko-mai, meaning “a whirl of activity/running about busily,” but it’s used here with nisshi, which means “diary/log.” The entire title conveys the image “a diary of bustling business activity” → “A Busy Business Diary”?

The hero of the story is a young employee of Tōa Electric, a medium-sized manufacturer of electrical appliances. He is transferred to the sales department, where he is treated like a military recruit and discovers that the world of sales is a “battlefield.” Even before the story shifts to the sales department, it’s clear there is a military influence in management, and military terms are used throughout this episode. The fighting, however, is between domestic makers—it’s the story of how the smaller Tōa Electric successfully competes with giants Matsushita, Hitachi, et. al.

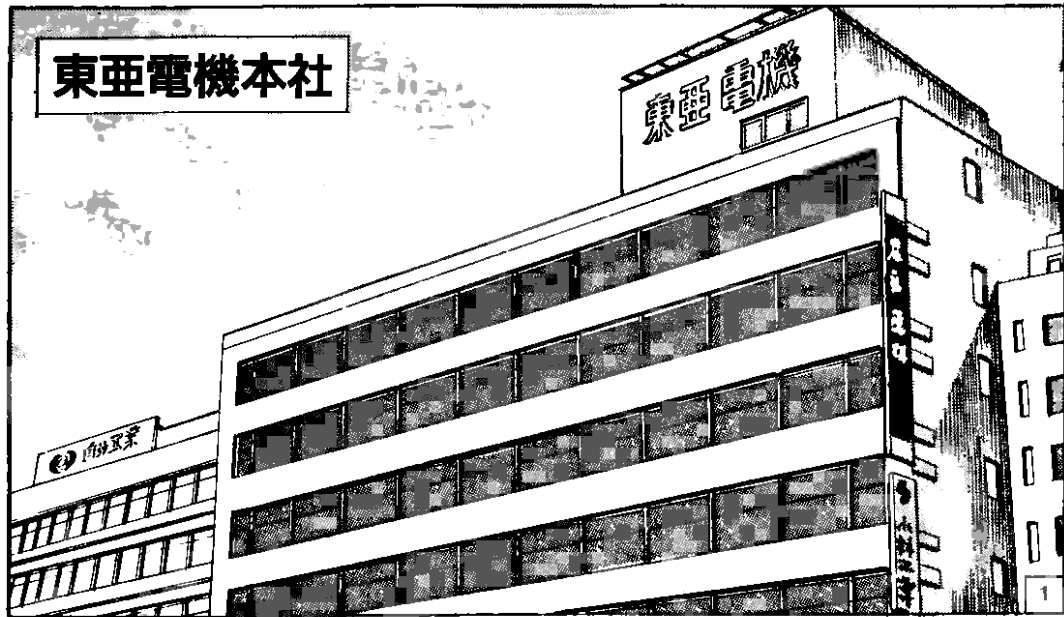

The victories (in this story, at least) are generally won through our hero’s sincerity, goodness of heart, and willingness to give his all for his customers. To some American readers, the series might seem like propaganda put out by company management to encourage their employees to be more loyal and dedicated. but in fact, Eigyō Tenteko Nisshi is just another popular manga series in Japan.

第1話
Dai-ichi-wa
No. 1 story
Story No.1

営業部 勤務 を 命ず
Eigyō-bu kinmu o meizu
Sales division service/duty (obj.) order/command
Ordered to Duty in the Sales Division

© Gyū & Kondō / Eigyō Tenteko Nisshi. First published in Japan in 1988 by スコラ/Scholar. English translation rights arranged through スコラ/Scholar.

●この作品はフィクションです。実在の人物、団体、事件などには関係ありません。

- 1 Narration: 東亜電機 本社
Tōa Denki Honsha
Tōa Electric Headquarters
- Sign on Roof: 東亜電機
Tōa Denki
Tōa Electric
- tō 東 means “east” and a 亜 is the first kanji of the word for “Asia” when it is written in kanji 亜細亜, so the name Tōa essentially means “East Asia.”
 - Denki 電機 is a contraction of denki kikai 電気機械 meaning “electric machinery/equipment,” so the name of this company tells you that they make electrical appliances and/or equipment.
 - honsha is literally “main/head company” → “head office/headquarters.”
- 2 Sign on Door: 役員室
Yakuin-shitsu
Executive Office(s)
- yakuin refers to an officer or executive of a company, and -shitsu is a suffix for “room/office.”
- 3 Executive: 南出 ヨ一助!!
Minamida Yōsuke (name)
- Minamida: ハイ!!
Hai
“Yes Sir!!” (PL3)
- 4 Executive: 総務部 厚生課 より 営業部 第三課 勤務 とする
Sōmu-bu Kōsei-ka yori Eigyō-bu Dai-san-ka kinmu to suru general affairs division welfare dept. from sales dept. third section duty make/assign “You are transferred from the General Affairs Department, Welfare Section, to the Sales Department, Section Three.” (PL2)
- the “Welfare Section” is something like “Benefits and Employee Services” in an American corporation.
 - Eigyō-bu Dai-sanka directly modifies kinmu (“duty/service”) without the usual no used between nouns, “Sales Division Section Three duty” → “duty in Section Three of the Sales Division.” The Eigyō-bu is usually one of the most challenging divisions of a company. In some companies all new employees are assigned there, to be “tested” and/or to pay their dues as newcomers; in others they are first tested in less demanding divisions before being tapped for the greater challenges of Eigyō-bu.
 - suru (“do/make”) in this case means “appoint/assign” (something like “make {your duties} . . .”). The preceding to marks everything before it as the content/description of the assignment/appointment.
- 5 Minamida: どうも Dōmo
indeed/very much
“Thank you very much.” (PL3-4)
- dōmo is actually only an intensifier, but it implies something like dōmo arigatō gozaimasu, “thank you very much.”

Margin Note:

この作品 は フィクションです。
Kono sakuhin wa fikushon desu this work as-for fiction is 実在の人物、団体、事件 など には 関係 ありません。

Jitsuzai no jinbutsu dantai jiken nado ni wa kankei arimasen actual persons organizations events things like to relationship does not exist

This work is fiction. It has no relationship to actual people, organizations, events, etc.

→ This is a work of fiction. Any resemblance to actual persons, organizations or events is purely coincidental. (PL3)

6	Sound FX: トコトコ Toko toko (effect of walking with short, quick steps)
7	Sound FX: ピリピリピリピリ Piri piri piri piri (effect of being tense and nervous; cf. piritto suru)
8	Executive: 電機 業界 は 今や 各社 乱戦!! Denki gyōkai wa imaya kakusha ransen electric industry as-for now each company turbulent battle 戦国時代 に 突入した と いったいい Sengoku jidai ni totsunyū shita to itte ii warring states period into have rushed into (quote) could say “The electrical appliance industry is now in a free-for-all battle. You could say we have plunged into a period of (business) warfare.” (PL2) Executive: 新製品 の 開発 系列店舗 の 整備拡充 円高 による 輸出 不振 など Shin-seihin no kaihatsu keiretsu-tenpo no seibi kakujū endaka ni yoru yushutsu fushin nado new products of development network stores of improvement & expansion high yendue to export stagnation etc. “The development of new products, the improvement and expansion of our network of dealers, the stagnation of exports due to the high yen, and so forth . . .” (PL2) Sound FX: シャキッ Shaki! (effect of being “crisply” at attention) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ending a sentence with a noun often implies da/desu (“is/are”). sengoku jidai (literally “warring states period”) in Japanese history refers to the sixteenth century when a succession of feudal lords vied to unify a fragmented Japan by establishing themselves as the supreme power. totsunyū shita is the plain/abrupt past form of totsunyū suru (“rush/charge into”). . . . to itte (mo) ii is literally “it’s good/fine/okay to say . . .” → “you/we could say . . .” keiretsu, an increasingly familiar word in English writings on Japanese business, refers to businesses that establish close, often exclusive, contractor-supplier ties with others in a single “business family/network.” the meanings of seibi range from “(the act of) equipping/maintaining” to “readjusting/rationalizing/improving/bringing to full potential.” • . . . ni yoru = “because of/owing to” nado (“et cetera/and the like”) completes the list of topics, and the sentence is completed in the next frame.
9	Executive: どれ を とっても 愉快的な材料 は ない!! dore o totte mo yukui na zairyō wa nai whichever (obj.) even if take pleasant material as-for does not exist “ . . . whichever you pick, there is no pleasant material.” → “ . . . no matter which you pick, there’s nothing pleasant.” (PL2) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> dore = “which/whichever” (of three or more items) totte is the -te form of toru (“take/select”); totte mo by itself is “even if (I/you) pick,” but after a question word it becomes “whichever/whatever (you) pick.”
10	Executive: これからは まさしく 社員 一人一人 の 肉弾戦 である Korekora wa masashiku shain hitori-hitori no nikudan-sen de aru from now as-for truly/really employee(s) one person one person of human-bullet-battle is/will be “From now on will certainly be a human-bullet-battle fought by each and every employee.” → “We face a time when each and every employee must literally throw himself into the battle like a human projectile.” (PL2) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> hitori-hitori = “one by one/each and everyone” (referring to people) nikudan is literally “meat/flesh bullet,” implying a person who makes a suicide attack. The term is used in referring to throwing oneself into a fight or competition unstintingly/tooth-and-nail. de aru is a more “literary” equivalent of da/desu (“is/are/will be”). We have labeled this PL2 (its PL3 form is de arimasu), but since it isn’t used colloquially it doesn’t really fit into our usual PL scheme.
11	Executive: 企業 戦争 は 知力 と 体力 の 戦い である!! Kigyō sensō wa chiryoku to tairyoku no tatakai de aru business enterprise warfare as-for intelligence and physical strength/endurance of battle/fight is/will be “Corporate wars are battles of intelligence and physical endurance.” (PL2) Sound FX: ピリピリ Piri piri (effect of being tense and nervous) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> chiryoku is literally “knowledge strength → intelligence,” while tairyoku is “body strength,” referring as often to endurance as to sheer physical prowess. In another context, chiryoku to tairyoku no tatakai might be translated as “a battle between brain and brawn.”

(continued on following page)

(continued from previous page)

12

Executive: 各員 一層の 刻苦勉強 を 願いたい ところ である。Kakuin issō no kokku-benrei o negai-tai tokoro de aru.

each employee all the more hard work & diligence (obj.)wish to ask place/circumstance is/are

“I’d like to ask each of you to work all the more industriously and diligently.” (PL2)

- kaku- is a prefix meaning “each” and in (“member”) in this case stands for shain (“member of the company → employee”).
- Kakuin issō no kokku-benrei o negai-tai expresses his complete thought, but here he uses that complete thought/sentence as a modifier for tokoro, to end with a rhetorical flourish.
- tokoro is literally “place/location,” but it’s often used in the abstract to mean “situation/circumstance,” so his rhetorical flourish is literally like saying “The circumstance is that I’d like to ask . . .”

(The next day)

15

Narration: 東亜電機の正式な始業時間は午前九時である...Tōa Denki no seishiki-na shigyō jikan wa gozen kuji de aru

Tōa Electric ('s) official starting time as-for 9 A.M. is

At Tōa Electric, the official starting time is 9 A.M. . . . (PL2)

しかし営業部では...

shikoshi eigyō-bu de wa

but/however sales department in

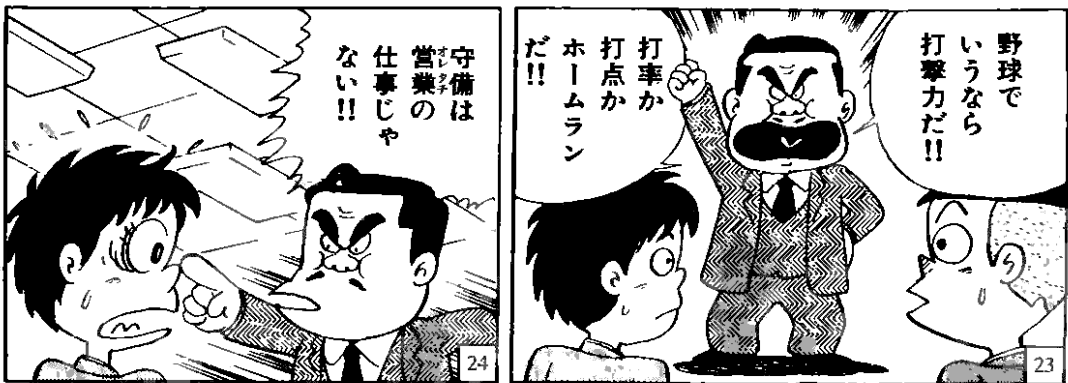

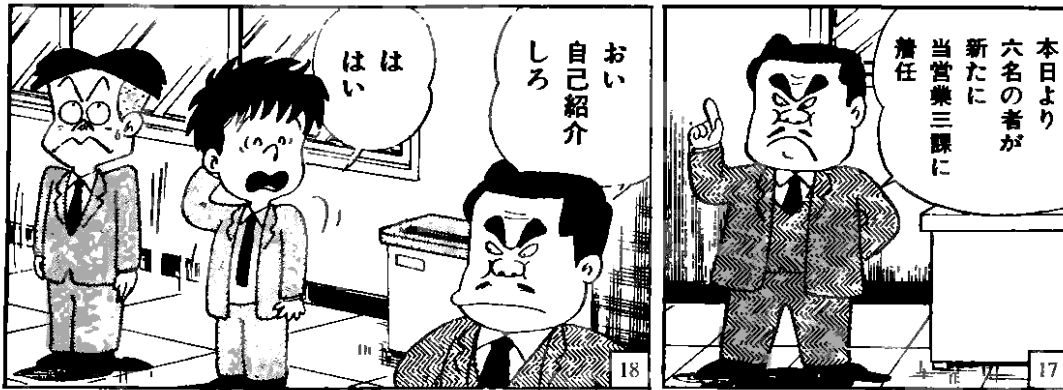

But in the sales department . . .

- shigyō is written with kanji meaning “begin” and “work/apply oneself to a task.” It can refer to the starting time for classes in school as well as to the beginning of the workday.
- seishiki is a noun meaning “correct form,” and with -na it becomes an adjective, “proper/official.”
- in Japanese, gozen (“before noon/A.M.”) and gogo (“after noon/P.M.”) come before the time rather than after.
- The second sentence is completed by the digital clock in the illustration.

16

Employees: おはようございます!!*Ohayō gozaimasu“Good Morning!!” (PL2)

- It is perhaps not quite universal but very common in the Japanese workplace to have a formal “morning greeting” — chōrei 朝礼 — before beginning work for the day. The chōrei will in many cases include a few words of encouragement or general work directives from the ranking member of the office/section/work group. In this case we will also see the introduction of the new section members.

- 17 Section Head: 本日 より 六名 の者 が 新たに 当 営業三課 に着任。 Honjitsu yori rokumei no mono ga arata-ni tō Eigyō San-ka ni chakunin today from/starting 6 people of persons (subj) newly this/our Sales Section 3 in take up new position “Six people have been newly assigned to our (third) sales section as of today.” (PL2)
 • -mei 名 is a counter for human beings that is more formal than the familiar -nin.
 • tō 当 is a prefix meaning “this -/the said -.”
- 18 Section Head: おい自己紹介 しろ
Oi. Jiko shōkai shiro.
 hey self-introduction do
“Hey, Introduce yourselves.” (PL2)
 • oi is a relatively rough way of getting someone’s attention: “Hey!”
 • shiro is the abrupt command form of suru (“do”).
Minamida: は はい
Ha hai
“Y- Yes Sir.” (PL3)
- 19 Minamida: ども厚生課 からきました...
Dōmo Kōsei-ka kara kimashita hi/hello welfare section from came
“Hi, I came from the Welfare Section ...” (PL3)
 • dōmo, essentially an intensifier, also serves as an all-purpose word of greeting that can be either formal or quite informal as suits the occasion. See Basic Japanese 8. • kimashita is the PL3 form of kuru (“come”). Since he is speaking in a formal tone, this could be the beginning of a sentence like, Kōsei-ka kara kimashita Minamida Yōsuke desu, “I am Minamida Yōsuke (who came) from the Welfare Section.”
- 20 Section Head: やめい!! /三課 じゃ 今までの 社歴 職歴 は 一切 無関係 だ。 Yamei San-ka ja ima made no shareki shokureki wa issai mukankei da stop Section 3 in until now ('s) history in co. employment history as-for entirely irrelevant are “Stop!! In Section Three your prior positions in the company and your employment history are completely irrelevant!!” (PL2) Minamida: は はい!!
Ha hai
“Y- Yes sir!!” (PL3)
 • yamei is an abrupt command form of yameru (“quit/stop”), elongated to yamei because he is yelling.
 • ja is a contraction of de wa; San-ka de wa is literally “as for in Section Three.”
- 21 Minamida: 南田 ヨー助です
Minamida Yōsuke desu.
“I’m Minamida Yōsuke.” (PL3)
2nd Employee: 寺島 敬治です
Terashima Keiji desu.
“I’m Terashima Keiji.” (PL3)
3rd Employee: 春日井 智生 です
Kasugai Chisei desu.
“I’m Kasugai Chisei.” (PL3)
4th Employee: 高岸 裕 です
Takagishi Yutaka desu.
“I’m Takagishi Yutaka.” (PL3)
5th Employee: 鈴木 健 です
Suzuki Ken desu.
“I’m Suzuki Ken.” (PL3)
6th Employee: 河川 仁 です
Kawaguchi Hitoshi desu.
“I’m Kawaguchi Hitoshi.” (PL3)
- 22 Section Head: いいか 営業 という 職場 は 得点 主義 だ
Ii ka Eigyō to iu shokuba wa tokuten shugi da okay (?) Sales called workplace as-for points/score/policy is “Now listen up. In sales it’s your score that counts.” (PL2)
 • ii ka (literally “is it good/okay?”) is often used at the beginning of a sentence like English “Listen up!”
 • eigyō to iu shokuba is literally “a workplace called ‘eigyō’” → “Sales Division.”
 • tokuten shugi = “scoring policy” — i.e., “our policy is to emphasize score” → “score is what counts.”
- 23 Section Head: 野球 で いうなら 打撃力 だ!! 打率 か 打点 か ホームラン だ!!
Yakyū de iu nara dageki-ryoku da Daritsu ka daten ka hōmuran da baseball in terms of if say hitting power is batting average or RBIs or home runs is/are “Speaking in terms of baseball, it’s hitting!! It’s batting average, or RBIs, or home runs!!” (PL2)
 • words or phrases in the pattern ... ka ... ka ... imply a choice among several options.

(continued on following page)

(continued from previous page)

24

Section Head: 守備 は 営業の 仕事 じゃない!!
Shubi wa oretachi no shigoto ja nai defense/fielding as-for out/Sales Section's work is not
"Fielding is not our job!!" (PL2)

- ore is a rough, masculine word for "I/me"; adding the suffix -tachi makes it plural, "we/us," and no makes it possessive, "belonging to us/our." Providing the kanji 営業 with a reading of oretachi is a compact way of saying (though only in print, of course) "we who are members of the Sales Division."

25

Section Head: 営業員 にとって 実力 誇りステイタスは すべて 数字 だ!!
Eigyō-in ni totte jitsuryoku hokori suteitatsu wa subete sūji da Sales Division member for merit/ability pride status as-for all numbers/figures are
"For Sales Department members, ability, pride, and status are all (in the) numbers." (PL2)

26

Section Head: 棒グラフが 一番 長い者 が 社内で 肩 で 風 切って 歩ける んだぞ
Bō gurafu ga ichiban nagai mono ga shanai de kata de kaze kitte arukeru n da zo bar graph (subj) most long person (subj) within the company shoulders with wind cut walk (expl)(emph)
"The person whose bar graph is highest is the one who can walk tall in this company." (PL2) その意味 では ベテランも 新人 も ない!!

Sono imi de wa heteran mo shinjin mo nai that meaning/sense in veteran(s) neither newcomer nor not exist
"In that sense there are no veterans or rookies!!" (PL2)

- bō gurafu ga ichiban nagai is a complete thought/sentence ("bar graph is the longest/tallest") modifying mono ("person").
- kata de kaze (o) kitte aruku (lit. "to walk cutting the wind with one's shoulders") is an expression describing a proud/swaggering walk, or "walking tall/with head held high."
- n(o) da is the PL2 form of the explanatory n(o) desu, "it's that . . . /the situation is that . . ."
- zo is a rough, masculine particle for emphasis.
- heteran, from English "veteran," is used to refer to people with many years' experience, but has no association with military service.
- . . . mo . . . mo followed by a negative makes an expression meaning "neither . . . nor . . ."

27

Section Head: 売れ よ!! 売れ よ!! / 売って 売って 売りまくれ!!
Ure yo Ure yo / Utte utte uri-makure sell (emph.)scil (emph) / sell-and sell-and sell intensely/without cease
"Sell!! Sell!! Sell and sell and sell for all you're worth!!" (PL2)

- ure is the abrupt command form, utte the -te form, and uri the stem form, of uru ("sell"). In this case the -te form functions like "and."
- makure is the abrupt command form of the verb makuru ("roll/turn up [one's sleeves]"), which, when used as a suffix for other verbs, implies doing that activity with intense effort.

28

Section Head: 時間 が もったいない / 本日 の 朝礼 が 終わり!!
Jikan ga mottainai / Honjitsu no chōrei owari time (subj.) seems wasteful / today ('s) morning greeting end/finish
"We're wasting time. This morning's greeting is over." (PL2)

- wa ("as for") has been omitted after chōrei, and de/desu ("is/are") has been left off at the end.

29

Employees: オスツ 売る ぞ!! 一台 売れば 一台 の 幸福!!
Osu! Uru zo Ichidai ureba ichidai no kōfuku (exclam.) will sell (emph.)one machine if sell one machine ('s) happiness
"Yeah! (We'll) sell! If we sell one appliance, it's one appliance's worth of happiness!!"
 ▶ "Yeah! Sell!! One appliance sold is one appliance's worth of happiness." (PL2)

- -dai is the counter suffix for a wide variety of machines, including most electrical appliances and electronic equipment that a company like Tōa Electric would be selling.
- urebo is a conditional "if" form of uru ("sell").
- needless to say, "happiness" is not normally counted with -dai, but poetic license is taken in slogans like this.

30

FX: ポカ〜ン
Poka-n (effect of being dumbfounded/dazed/speechless with surprise or disbelief)

31

Sound FX: サッ
Sal (effect of a very quick, adroit action)

32

Voice 1: もしもし こちら 東亜電機 ですが
Moshi-moshi kochira Tōa Denki desu ga hello this side Tōa Electric is and/but “Hello, this is Tōa Electric . . .” (PL3)

Sound FX: ワイワイ / ガヤガヤ / ワイワイ
Wai wai / Gaya gaya / Wai wai (these two sounds, together or independently, are the standard FX for a crowd of people talking noisily.)

Voice 2: おして おしまくれ!!
Oshite oshi-makure
 push-and push intensely/without cease “Push and keep on pushing!!” (PL2)

Voice 3: エッ これ以上 手形サイト は 短縮 できませんよ
E! Kore ijō tegata saito wa tanshuku dekimasen yo what? this more than promissory note term as-for shorten/reduce cannot (emph.)
 “What? We can’t reduce the period of the promissory note any more than this.” (PL3)

Voice 4: バーロ!!
Bāro fool/idiot
 “You idiot!!” (PL2)

Voice 5: 取引 を やめるって いうなら 別ですが ね
Torihiki o yameru tte iu nara betsu desu ga ne deal/transaction (obj.) quit (quote) say if is different but (colloq.)
 “If you’re saying you’re going to stop dealing with us, that’s a different matter, but . . .” (PL3)

Voice 6: 販売店 というのは ダッコしてやりゃあ 次は オンブしてくれ って いうんだ Hanbai-ten to iu no wa dakko shite yaryā tsugi wa onbu shite kure tte iu n da retail shops things called as-for if hold in arms next as-for please carry on back (quote) say (explan.)
 “As for retailers, if you take them in your arms, next they ask you to carry them on your back.” →
 “The thing about retailers is that, if you hold their hand, the next thing you know they want you to carry them.” (PL2)

- some voices are talking on the phone, and others are Tōa employees speaking among themselves.
- oshite and oshi-makure are both from the verb osu (“push/apply pressure”).
- tegata refers to a promissory note or bank bill. When Tōa sells to a customer (retail shop) on credit, the customer issues a tegata with period of time (usually a multiple of 30 days) specified. This period of time is generally written as, for example, 翌後30日払い ichiran-go sanjū-nichi-barai, “payable 30 days after sight,” and “sight,” or saito in katakana, is a shorthand way of referring to the length of the promissory note. This comment is probably a salesman telling his supervisor that he can’t get the customer to pay quicker.
- bāro is a contraction of baka yarō, “idiot/fool” plus “fellow/guy” → “you idiot!”
- tte is a colloquial equivalent of quotative to, and tte iu nara means “if you say/if you are saying.”
- . . . to iu no wa is literally “as for this thing called . . .” Grammatically, this is essentially the same as just saying . . . wa, but it emphasizes/focuses the topic more → “speaking of –/the thing about – is . . .”
- dakko (suru) is babytalk for daku (“hug/hold in one’s arms”) and onbu is babytalk for obuu (“bear on one’s back”), but these are babytalk words that get used quite a bit by grownups as well.
- shite varyā is a contraction of shite yareba, combining the -te form of suru (“do”) and a conditional “if/when” form of yaru (“give [to someone else]”). The -te form + yaru = “do for (someone of lower rank).”
- -te form + kure (from kureru, “give [to me]”) makes an informal request, “(please) do (for me).”

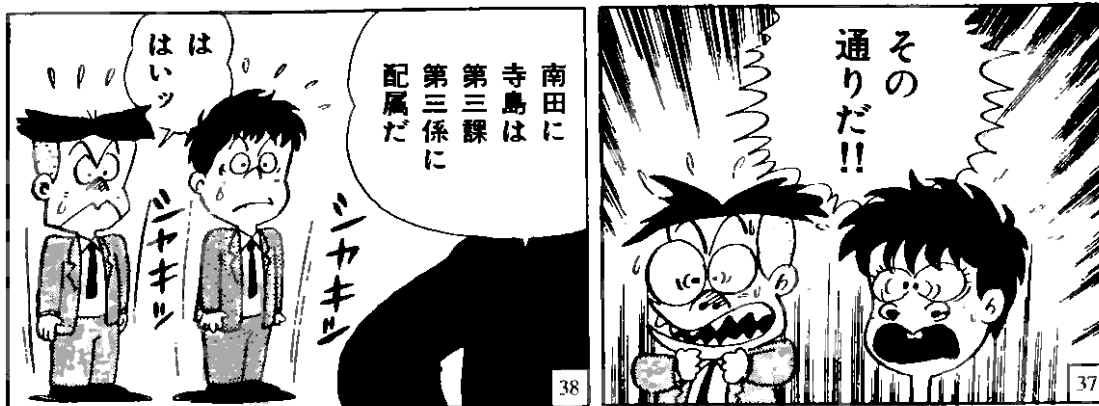

33

Minamida: とても 同じ 東亜電機 と は 思えないなあ . . .
Totemo onaji Tōa Denki to wa omoenai nā
 (emph.) same Tōa Electric (quote) as-for cannot think (exclam.)
 “It’s hard to believe it’s the same Tōa Electric . . .” (PL2)

始業時間 前に 朝礼 すぐさま 実働 と は . . .
Shigyō jikan mae ni chōrei Sugusama jitsudō to wa starting time before morning greeting immediately actual work (quote) as-for “The morning greeting before starting time, then immediately to work . . .” (PL2)

- totemo followed by a negative means “(cannot) possibly,” so totemo . . . omoenai means “I really cannot think (‘it’s the same company’)” → “it’s hard to believe . . .”

(continued on following page)

(continued from previous page)

34 Salesman: じゃま だ じゃま だ Jama da Jama da obstacle/in the way is/are obstacle/in the way is/are “You’re in my way! You’re in my way!” → “Get out of my way! Get out of my way!” (PL2)

Sound FX: ドン
Don (effect of bumping/pushing Minamida out of the way)

Minamida: わっ
Wa!
“Yikes!”

35 Minamida: ここは 戦場 だ...
Koko wa senjō da
 this place as-for battlefield is “This place is a battlefield . . .” (PL2)

Sound FX: ワイワイ / ナンダナンダ / ガヤガヤ
Wai wai / Nan da Nan da / Gaya gaya (effect of noisy crowd)

Terashima: エッ?!
E!
 what?
“Huh?!” (PL2)

- nan da is literally “what is it?” but here it’s being treated as part of the general noisiness of the busy office.

36 Minamida: 課長 が 鬼軍曹 で 係長 は 伍長...
Kachō ga oni-gunsō de Kakarichō wa gochō section head (subj.) ogre sergeant and group leader as-for corporal
“The Section Head is the hard-driving sergeant, and the group leader is the corporal . . .”
 (PL2)

Terashima: すると 俺たちは 二等兵 かあ...
Suru to ore-tachi wa nitōhei kā
 then/in that case we/us as-for private second class (?)
“Then are we privates second class?” → “Then we’re privates second class, I guess.” (PL2)

- oni is literally “ogre/demon,” but it’s also used to imply that a person is extremely dedicated/relentless.
- kakari is a sub-group within the ka, or section, and -chō is a suffix meaning “head/chief/leader.”

37 Voice: その通りだ!!
Sono tōri da that way it is “That’s exactly right!!” (PL2)

38 Voice: 南田 に 寺島 は 第三課 第三係 に 配属だ
Minamida ni Terashima wa dai-san-ka dai-san-kakari ni haizoku da Minamida and Terashima as-for Section Three Group Three to is are assigned “Minamida and Terashima (you two) are assigned to Section Three Group Three!!” (PL2)

FX: シャキッ シャキッ
Shaki! Shaki! (effect of coming crisply to attention)

M & T: は はいッ
Ha hai!
“Yes Sir!” (PL3)

- the particle ni can be used to mean “and,” like the particle to.

39 Shibata: 俺 が 係長 の 柴田日吉丸 だ よく 覚えとけよ Ore ga kakari-chō no Shibata Hiyoshimaru da Yoku oboetoke yo
 I/me (subj.) group leader (=) (name) am well remember (emph.)
“I’m your group leader, Shibata Hiyoshimaru. Don’t you forget it.” (PL2)

- no between two nouns can have many different meanings, but here it functions like “. . . who is/that is . . .”
- yoku is the adverb form of ii/yo! (“good/nice”), and oboetoke is a contraction of oboete oke, the command form of oboete oku, from oboeru (“learn/memorize”) and oku (“set/place”).

. . . to be CONCLUDED in the next issue of Mangajin

The time has come to change a future
that is now upon us...
Akira — on sale quarterly in handsome trade paperback editions beginning in March, only from Epic® Comics.

AKIRA™

BY KATSUHIRO OTOMO

Also look for Akira's adventures in bookshelf editions on sale monthly.

Copyright © 1992 MASH • ROOM Co. Ltd. EPIC COMICS is a registered trademark of Epic Comics. All rights reserved.

The Phoenix © Tezuka Productions, is a twelve-volume work of over 4,000 pages. This story, published in MANGAJIN in three installments, is just a small part of Volume 4. English translation rights arranged through Tezuka Productions.

火の鳥

The Phoenix

by 手塚治虫 Tezuka Osamu

In the last episode . . .

Akanemaru, a talented young sculptor in 8th-century Japan, has been commanded to carve an image of the phoenix. He begs Imperial official Kibi no Makibi to let him go to China to see the real phoenix; instead he receives permission to enter the Shōsō-in a storehouse of art treasures donated by the imperial household to Tōdai-ji temple in Nara.

In the Shōsō-in, among the priceless works of art is a painting of the phoenix. Akane-maru is overcome with wonder, and is filled with a certainty that he will see the bird before he dies.

The next thing we know, he is on a ship bound for China. As he ponders the meaning of the immortal phoenix, a storm blows up, and Akanemaru is swept overboard. Slowly he sinks to the bottom of the sea.

1

Akanemaru: ここは どこ だろう... おれは たしか海 におぼれて 死んだはずだ
Koko wa doko darō Ore wa tashika umi ni oborete shinda hazu da here as-for where (I) wonder I/me as-for certain ocean in drowned-and died should be “Where is this, I wonder? I was sure I drowned in the ocean and should be dead.”
 ▶ “Where am I? I could have sworn I fell into the ocean and died.” (PL2)

- darō, when combined with a question word, means “I wonder where/what/who/etc.”
- ore is an informal/rough, masculine word for “I/me.”
- tashika means “I think/if I’m not mistaken/I’m pretty sure.” Hazu is used to indicate expectation of the way things are/should be.
- oborete is the -te form of oboreru, “drown,” and shinda is the plain past form of shinu, “die.”

2

Voice: そうだ おまえは 一度 死んだ。大和 の 茜丸 というもの は もう いない。
Sō da Omae wa ichido shinda. Yamato no Akanemaru to iu mono wa mō inai.
 that is so/right you as-for once died (place) of (name) called person as-for already not exist “That’s right. You have died once. The person called Akanemaru of Yamato no longer exists.” (PL2) その 肉体 は くさって 水 にとけてしまったの だろう...

Sono nikutai wa kusatte mizu ni tokete shimatta no darō that/his body as-for decayed-and water in dissolved completely (explan.) probably “His body (must have) decayed and completely dissolved into the water.” (PL2)

- omae is an abrupt/informal word for “you.” It implies that the “voice” is older or a superior being/force.
- Yamato was the name of an early province in the area of modern Nara, where the first central government of Japan arose, and hence was also one of the early names for Japan as a whole.
- mono in this case would be written with the kanji 者, indicating a person rather than a thing.
- inai is the negative form of iru, “is/are/exists” for animate things.
- nikutai combines the kanji for “meat” and “body,” so it’s like saying “physical body” in English.
- kusatte is from kusaru (“rot/decay”) and tokete is from tokeru (“melt/dissolve”). Shimatta (the past form of shimau, “finish/end/close”) after the -te form of a verb means that the action is completely finished.
- darō (“perhaps/probably is”) is one of several conjectural forms of Japanese that tend to be used much more frequently than conjectural forms in English. It’s often best treated as the same as da (“is/are”).

3

Voice: いまの 肉体 は それだ
Ima no nikutai wa sore da now of body as-for that is “Your present body is that.” (PL2)

Akanemaru: ええっ!!
Ee!
 “What?!” (PL2)

4

Microorganism: これは... なんですか? 私 は だれですか?
Kore wa nan desu Watashi wa dare desu ka this as-for what is? I as-for who is/am (?)
 “What is this? Who am I?” (PL3)

Voice: おまえは いま水 の 中 に すむ 微生物 だ Omae wa ima mizu no naka ni sumu biseibutsu da you as-for now water of inside in live(s) microorganism is/are “You are now a microorganism that lives in the water.” (PL2)

ごみ の ように ちいさな あわれな 生きもの だ
Gomi no yō ni chiisa-na aware-na ikimono da dust like small pitious living thing/creature is/are “You are a creature as tiny and insignificant as a speck of dust.” (PL2)

おまえは 茜丸 で なくなったとたん に いまの 肉体 で 生まれてきたのだよ Omae wa Akanemaru de naku natta totan ni ima no nikutai de umarete kita no da yo you as-for (name) is/are not became the instant at now of body with/in born-and came (expl) (emph)
 “At the instant you were no longer Akanemaru, you were reborn in your present body.” (PL2)

- mizu no naka ni sumu is a complete thought/sentence (“live[s] in the water”) modifying biseibutsu (“microorganism”) • ... no yō ni = “like ...”
- ... de naku natta is the past form of ... de naku naru, literally, “become not ...” ▶ “when (you/she/they/it) is/are no longer ...” Here, Akanemaru de naku natta (“[you] were no longer Akanemaru”) is a complete thought/sentence modifying totan (“the moment/instant”).
- umarete is the -te form of umareru (“be born”), and kita is the plain/abrupt past form of kuru (“come”). Kita after a verb can add various meanings, but here it’s like “were born and came into this world.”

5 Microorganism: ど- どうして こんな 姿 に... これは ひどいな!
Do- dōshite konna sugata ni Kore wa hidoi na
 why this kind of appearance/shape into this as-for terrible (colloq.)
“Wh, why have I become like this? This is terrible.” (PL2) 私 は どんな 罪 で こう なった んです?
Watashi wa donna tsumi de kō natta n desu
 I/me as-for what kind of sin/crime because of this way became (explan.-?)
“Because of what kind of crime have I become this way?” → “What have I done to deserve this?” (PL3)

Voice: 罪 でも 報い でも ない はじめ から 決められた こと なの だから...
Tsumi de mo mukui de mo nai Hajime kara kimerareta koto na no da kara sin/crime or/nor retribution or/nor is not Beginning from was decided thing (explan.) because “It’s not (anything to do with) a crime or retribution. (Because) it was determined from the beginning.” (PL2)

おまえが 人間 である 時代 を おえれば べつの生きものとして生まれるのだ。
Omae ga ningen de aru jidai o oereba betsu no ikimono toshite umareru no da.
 you (subj.) human being is/are period (obj.) when [you] finish a different creature as is/are born (explan.)
“When you are done being a human, you are reborn as something else.” (PL2)

- sugata can refer either to physical form or to outward appearance.
- the implied verb for the first sentence is natta (past of naru, “become”) or kawatta (past of kawaru, “change”): Dōshite konna sugata ni natta/kawatta no darō ka.
- na is an informal/masculine equivalent of ne, which often works like a tag question (“isn’t it?/didn’t you?”) or like “you know,” but here it is merely for emphasis.
- de indicates the means or cause of an action/occurrence.
- when a sentence contains a question word, the question marker ka can be omitted, with the rising intonation for a question transferred to the last syllable of desu.
- ... de mo ... de mo nai is an expression meaning “it is neither ... nor ...”
- kimerareta is the past form of kimerareru, which is the passive form of kimeru (“decide”). hajime kara kimerareta is a complete thought/sentences (“was decided from the beginning”) modifying koto (“thing”).
- na no da is the equivalent of the explanatory no da (“it’s that ...”) for use after nouns.
- de aru is a form of desu (“is/are”), and omae ga ningen de aru is a complete thought/sentence (“you are a human being”) modifying jidai (“period/era/times”). For a da/desu sentence to directly modify a noun, the ending must be changed to de aru (or in some cases na).
- oereba is a conditional “if/when” form of oeru (“finish/complete”).

6 Microorganism: いや です!! 私 は 人間 だ 人間 のままに 生きのびたい!
Iya desu Watashi wa ningen da Ningen no mama ni ikinobi-tai disagreeable is I/me as-for human being is/am human being as is want to live on “No! I am a human being. I want to live on as a human being.” (PL2) こんな みじめな からだは ごめんです!

Konna mijime-na karada wa gomen desu
 this kind of miserable body as-for beg to decline
“A miserable body like this, I beg to decline. → “There’s no way I can accept a miserable body like this.” (PL3)

- iya desu is literally “it’s unpleasant/disagreeable,” but the expression is often used to mean “No!/I won’t/I refuse.”
- mama = “as is/unchanged” so ningen no mama means “remain (unchanged) as a human being.”
- ikinobi-tai is the “want to” form of ikinobiru, combining ikiru (“live”) and nobiru (“extend/stretch out”) to mean “to go on living.”
- gomen nasai is one of the most common ways to apologize (“I’m sorry/excuse me”), but gomen desu is an expression meaning “I’ll have none of that” — usually a fairly vehement rejection

9 Microorganism: あっ なにか 大きな もの が くる。のみこまれたら最後 だぞ。
A! Nani ka ōki-na mono ga kuru. Nomikomaretara saigo da zo.
 oh! something large/big thing (subj.) comes if I am swallowed the last is (emph.)
“Oh no! Something big is coming. If I’m swallowed, it’s all over.” (PL2)

- nani = “what” and nani ka = “something/anything”
- ōki-na is an alternate form of the adjective ōkii (“big/large”).
- nomikomaretara is a conditional “if/when” form of nomikomareru (“be swallowed”), the passive form of nomikomu (“swallow”).

10

Microorganism: わーっ きたーっ!! 助けて くれ!
Wa—! Kita—! Tasukete kure
 (exclam.) came help/save me please
“Yikes! It’s here! Help!” (PL2)

- kita is the plain/abrupt past form of kuru (“come”). In Japanese the exclamation is in the past tense because the fish “has come” very close.
- tasukete is the -te form of tasukeru (“help/assist/rescue”), and kure is a command form of kureru (“give [to me]”). Kure after the -te form of a verb can make either a command or a relatively abrupt-sounding request, “(please) do for me.” Tasukete kure! is an urgent cry for help in an emergency. A more normal request for help (with a task, etc.) would use the verb tetsudau (“aid/help/assist”): tetsudatte kure/kudasai.

11

Sound FX: ガボー
Gabo—Gulp

Rising Sun

(continued from page 20)

havior that seems sneaky and cowardly to Americans is standard operating procedure to Japanese.” He provides an elegantly simple explanation for the process of kaizen (continuous improvement): “They kaizen’em. A process of deliberate, patient, continual refinements. Americans are always looking for the quantum leap, the big advance forward. Americans try to hit a home run—to knock it out of the park—and then sit back. The Japanese just hit singles all day long, and they never sit back.”

Many of Crichton’s cultural insights are indeed on the mark, but one glaring error is his assertion that the Japanese commonly use the expression “business is war.” Some Japanese bureaucrats and businessmen may think this way, but there is no such commonly used expression.

Rising Sun does serve as an economic wake-up call for Americans, and, as such, should move Americans to learn more about Japanese culture as well as Japan’s trade and industrial policies. Others have sounded similar alarms but none have delivered the message using such an accessible and compelling vehicle. Unfortunately, just like an Oliver Stone docudrama, the novel gives Crichton license to play fast and loose with the facts and manipulate reality to fit his own vision of the Japanese threat. It is obvious he looks at Japan with a mix of awe and rage as he portrays the Japanese as a sort of “Robo-Race,” a monolithic, inscrutable, devious, and inhumanly patient people bent on nothing less than economic domination of the world. For Crichton, “Everything works in Japan.” The problem is that no society is or ever will be the marvel of efficiency and single-minded determination that Crichton seems to think Japan is.

Greg Tenhover is MANGAJIN’s Marketing Manager, and author of Unlocking the Japanese Business Mind.

12

“Sound” FX: ピク ピクピク
Piku piku piku
Twitch twitch twitch

15

Egg: 私 は どうした ん だろう?
Watashi wa dō shita n darō
 I/me as-for how/what happened (explan.) I wonder
“I wonder what’s happened to me.” (PL2)

Egg: 私 は いったいだれ だ? ぼうっとして なんだか 思い出せない
Watashi wa ittai dare da Bō-ito shite nan da ka omoidasenai
 I/me as-for who in the world is/am is dim/fuzzy-and somehow can’t remember “Who in the world am I? It’s all a blur and I somehow can’t remember” (PL2)

- dō is literally “how” and shita is the past form of suru (“do/make”), but dō shita is an expression meaning “what’s the matter?/what has happened?”
- the n in dō shita n darō is a contraction of the explanatory no — in this case asking for an explanation.
- darō, when combined with a question word, means “I wonder how/what/who/etc.”
- ittai places strong emphasis on the question word that follows: “who/what/how in the world/where the blazes/etc.”
- bō-ito shite is the -te form of bō-ito suru, “feel dazed/fuzzyheaded.”
- nan da ka might literally be translated as “What is it?” but it has the idiomatic meaning of “somehow/for some reason or other”
- omoidasenai (“can’t recall/remember”) is the negative form of omoidaseru (“can recall/remember”), which is the potential (“can/able to”) form of omoidasu (“recall/remember”). Omoidasu comes from the verb omou, meaning “think [of],” plus dasu, meaning “take/put/bring out.”

19

Turtle: 私 は なにを すれば いい のです か?

Watashi wa nani o sureba ii no desu ka
I/me as-for what (obj.) if do good/fine (explan.) is (?)

“What am I supposed to do?” (PL3)

私 には なにか 目的 が あった ように思うのです が...

Watashi ni wa nani ka mokuteki ga atta yō ni omou no desu ga
I/me for-as-for something purpose/goal (subj.) had/existed think/feel like (explan.) but “I feel like I had some kind of goal, but . . .” (PL3)

Voice: おまえは いま 海 にすむ カメと いう 生きもの だ。

Omae wa ima umi ni sumu kame to iu ikimono da.
you as-for now ocean/sea in live(s) turtle (quote) called living thing/creature is/are

“You are now a creature called a turtle, who lives in the ocean.” (PL2)

そのまえ には ごみのような 微生物 だった。

Sono mae ni wa gomi no yō na biseibutsu datta.
before that as-for dustlike microorganism was/were

“Before that you were a microorganism no bigger than a speck of dust.” (PL2)

そのまえ には 人間 だった おぼえている かな?

Sono mae ni wa ningen datta oboete-iru ka na before that as-for human being was/were remember do you perhaps?

“(And) before that you were a human. Do you perhaps remember?” (PL2)

Turtle: ニンゲン...? さあ わかりません。

Ningen Sā wakarimasen.
human being Hmm don't know/understand

“A human? Hmm, I don't know.” (PL3)

- sureba is a conditional “if/when” form of suru (“do”). Sureba ii is literally “is good/okay if (I) do,” and nani o sureba ii has the meaning “what should I do” > “what am I supposed to do.”
- nani ka mokuteki ga atta is a complete thought/sentence (“had some purpose”) modifying the noun yō of yō ni omou (“feel that way/like that”). . . . yō ni omou is essentially the same as to omou (“think/feel that”), but sounds less certain/definite, more tentative.
- umi ni sumu is a complete thought/sentence (“live in the ocean”) modifying kame (“tortoise/turtle”). Similarly, umi ni sumu kame to iu is a complete thought/sentence (“[is] called a sea turtle, which lives in the sea”) modifying ikimono (a word combining “live” + “thing” > “living thing/creature”).
- da is the PL2 equivalent of desu (“is/are”), and datta is its plain/abrupt past form.
- . . . no yō means “like . . .” so gomi no yō means “like dust.” The ending -na makes it function as an adjective (“dustlike”), modifying biseibutsu (“microorganism”).
- oboete-iru is from oboeru (“learn/commit to memory”); -iru after the -te form of a verb indicates either that the action is continuing, or that the result of the action continues. The result of committing something to memory is that it remains in memory, so oboete-iru means “remember(s).”
- sā when replying to a question indicates uncertainty regarding what one has been asked.
- wakarimasen is the PL3 negative form of wakaru (“comprehend/understand/know”).

20

Voice: 大和 の 菟丸 と いう 人間 だ

Yamato no Akanemaru to iu ningen da
Yamato/Japan of (name) (quote) called human being is/are

“You were a human called Akanemaru of Yamato.” (PL2)

Turtle: さっぱり おぼえていません

Sappari oboete-imasen
at all/completely don't remember

“I don't remember at all.” (PL3)

Voice: おまえの 泳いでいる ところは 長江 の 河口 だよ

Omae no oyoide-iru tokoro wa Chōkō no kakō da yo you (subj.) are swimming place as-for Yangtze River of river mouth is (emph.)

“The place you are swimming is the mouth of the Yangtze River.” (PL2)

Voice: おまえは ここで死ぬまで ゆっくり暮らすのだ

Omae wa koko de shinu made yukkuri kurasu no da
you as-for here at die until leisurely live (explan.)

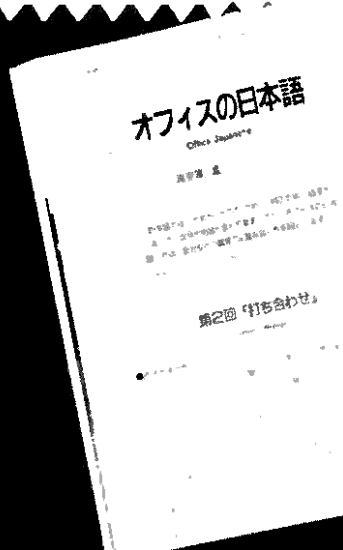

“You will spend your days here quietly until you die.” (PL2)

- sappari followed by a negative means “(not) at all/(none) whatever.”
- oboete-imasen is the PL3 negative of oboete-iru (“remember” — see previous frame).
- oyoide-iru is the continuing action (“is/are -ing”) form of oyogu (“swim”). Omae no oyoide-iru is a complete thought/sentence (“you are swimming”) modifying tokoro (“place”). In such modifying clauses, no replaces the usual ga for indicating the subject.
- 長江, read Chōkō in Japanese, is the Chinese name for the Yangtze River. The kanji mean “long inlet.”
- kakō is made up of the kanji for “river” and the kanji for “mouth.”

(continued on page 61)

YOUR SHORTCUT TO PROGRESS
IN JAPANESE STARTS WITH THIS MAGAZINE.

FOR BEGINNING AND INTERMEDIATE LEARNERS

Monthly The Nihongo Journal

The Nihongo Journal is a learning magazine designed to help its readers acquire a readily useful, lifelike command of Japanese. For starters, you'll find lessons that take you into a variety of language subjects, such as everyday office Japanese. Elsewhere, "This month's feature" strikes off each time on a fresh new angle in order to bring out key facets of cultural life in Japan as well as presenting information key to your life. Then, too, for those interested in Japanese corporate job-hunting, NJ's "information columns" provide an assorted range of work opportunity info. So, if you're after a closer, more tangible touchstone with Japan and its language, this magazine's for you!

The Nihongo Journal Available at the following book stores

Hawaii
BUN BUN DO BOOK STORE

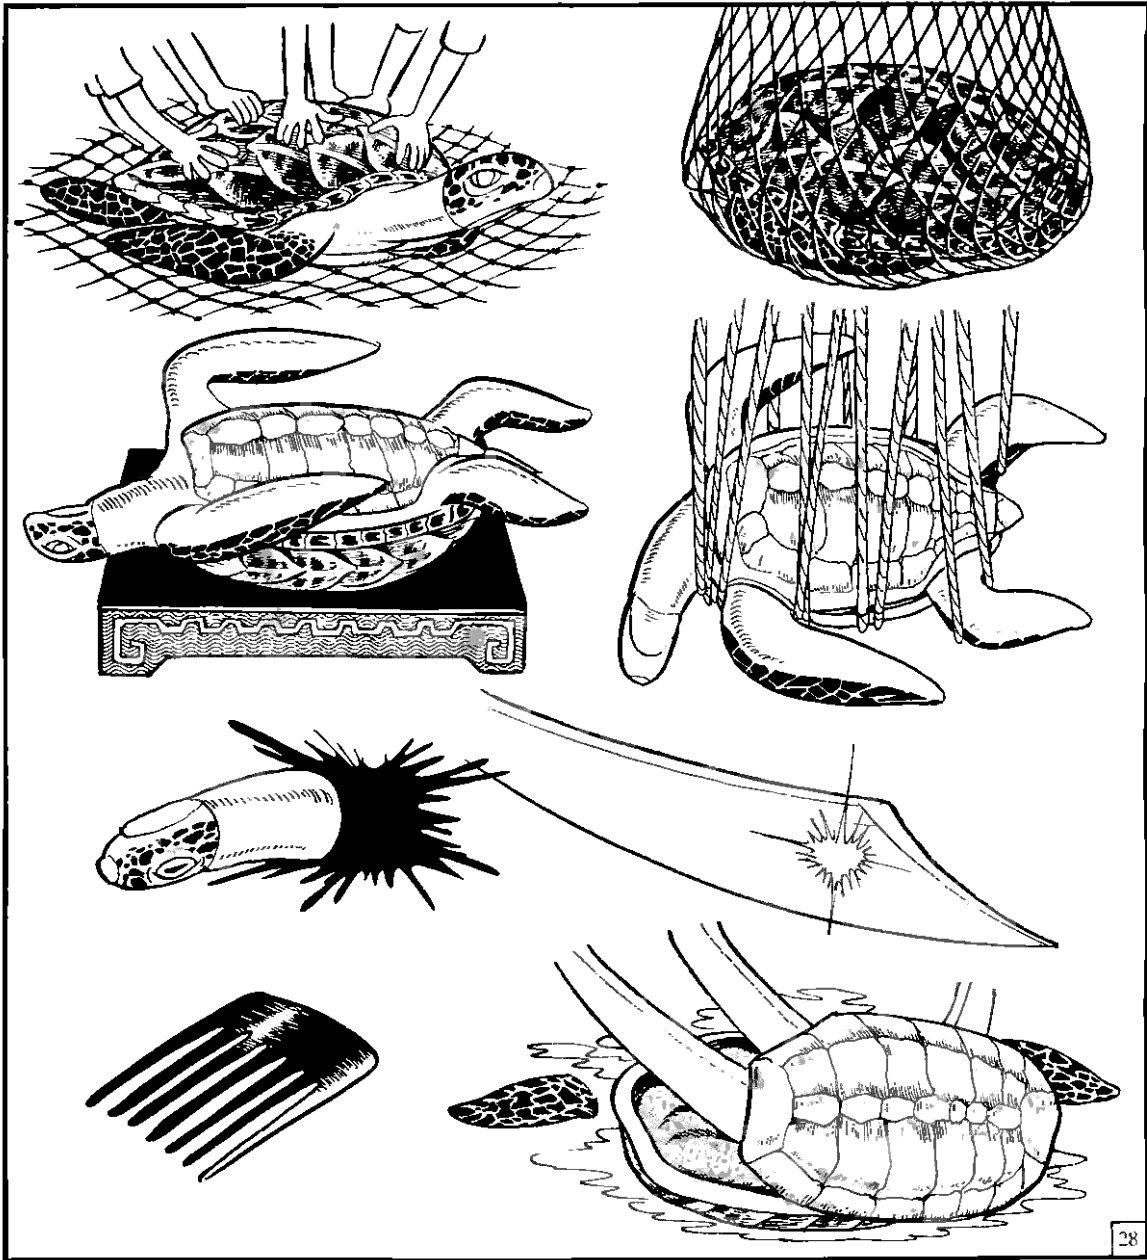

California
KINOKUNIYA BOOK STORES OF AMERICA CO., LTD.

SAN FRANCISCO STORE
NEW OTANI STORE
LOS ANGELES STORE
TORRANCE STORE
COSTA MESA STORE

KINOKUNIYA BOOK & GALLERY
BOOKS NIPPAN
New York
NEW YORK KINOKUNIYA BOOK STORE
TOKYO SHOTEN

Oregon
ANZEN IMPORERS

Networking for Global Communication
ALCPRESS INC.
2-54 12 EIBI'KI SUGINAMI-KU TOKYO 168 JAPAN
PHONE: 03-322-1001 FAX: 03-322-1300

(continued from page 55)

- yukkuri is literally “slowly/leisurely,” but in idiomatic use it’s often closer to “quietly/peacefully.”
- kurasu = “live” in the sense of “passing one’s daily existence” > “spend (one’s) days.”
- no da indicates that an explanation is being made as well as provides emphasis, something like saying “and that’s the way it is.”

35

Sound FX: チ チ チ チ チ チ チ
Chi chi chi chi Chi chi chi
Chirp chirp chirp chirp chirp chirp chirp

36

Baby Bird: おかあさんどこへ
Okāsan doko e
 Mother where to “Where are we going, Mother?” (PL2-3)

Mother Bird: ホウのところにへ Hō no tokoro e
 phoenix (’s) place to
“To see the phoenix.” (PL2-3)

- the proper Japanese word for phoenix is hōō. Dropping a syllable and writing the word in katakana is presumably intended to indicate “bird language.”
- the baby bird and the mother bird both imply the verb iku (“go”) at the end of their respective sentences.
- tokoro literally means “place,” but in this colloquial usage, they are not really going to the “phoenix’s place,” as much as they are going to “see/call on the phoenix.” (cf. MANGAJIN No.14, page 67, frame 35)

37

Baby Bird: ホウってなに？
Hō tte na—ni
 phoenix (quote) what (is it?)
“What’s a phoenix?” (PL2)

Mother Bird: 私たち鳥全部があがめているかたよ
Watashi-tachi tori zenbu ga agamete-iru kata yo we birds all (subj.)respect/revere someone is “It’s someone we birds all revere.” (PL2)

- tte is essentially a contraction of to iu no wa, literally “as for what is called . . .”
- na—ni is simply an elongated nani (“what”), which by itself is sufficient to ask the question “What is it?” in colloquial speech. The first vowel is often lengthened in such cases, especially by children. In PL3 speech, the question would be stated nan desu ka.
- the suffix -tachi turns nouns referring to people into plurals, so watashi (“I/me”) + -tachi = “we.”
- agamete-iru is from agameru (“respect/revere/worship”).
- kata is a polite way to refer to another person — or in this case, since we are looking in on bird society, another bird. Even though she’s using PL2 speech with her child, she shows her respect for the phoenix by referring to her with a polite form.
- in informal (especially feminine) speech, the emphatic particle yo by itself can give the meaning of daldesu yo (“is/are,” with gentle emphasis).

to be continued
*in the next issue of MANGAJIN

The Phoenix © Tezuka Productions, is a work of over 4,000 pages compiled in 12 volumes. The episode which we are presenting in three installments is only a small part of volume four.

作・窪之内英策 story • Kariya Tetsu 画・花咲アキラ
 art • Hanasaki Akira

おい 美味しんぼ
 O i s h i n b o

The story so far . . .

Jeff Larson, has come to Japan to pursue his training as an itamae, or Japanese chef. He has a letter of introduction to Tanimura-buchō, head of the “culture” department (which includes food & restaurants), at the Tōzai Shinbun, a major Tōkyō newspaper. Tanimura has agreed to help Jeff find a place to continue his training.

Tanimura takes Jeff to a slick, modern-looking restaurant called West Coast, where the chefs put on a Benihana-style show. When he tries their sashimi, Jeff realizes that the restaurant is all show, and that the food is not that good. Apologetically, Jeff voices his opinion, and declines training at West Coast. The shop owner and his star chef become angry, and to resolve the situation, Yamaoka (the “hero” of this series) proposes a sashimi-making competition—one week from then.

With only one week to prepare for the competition, Yamaoka takes Jeff to the old master, Ōfuji Seibei, owner of the small, traditional restaurant Taifuji.

Ōfuji amazes them with his knife technique, and delights them with the taste of his sashimi. Unable to contain himself, Jeff begs Ōfuji to take him on as his deshi, or “disciple.” Ōfuji finally agrees to help Jeff prepare for the competition, in which sashimi will be prepared in the difficult arai style.

The first step in Jeff’s training consists of katsura-muki—trying to peel a continuous “sash” of more than three meters from a single daikon radish. Ōfuji tells Jeff to practice “. . . as if your life depended on it . . . without even sleeping at night.” This is basic training for knife technique, and in this issue we learn why that is so important in preparing sashimi.

1

Shop Owner: じゃ 始めようか . . .
Ja hajimeyō ka
 well then let's begin (?)
 “Well, then, shall we begin?” (PL2)

- hajimeyō is the volitional (“let’s . . . /I think I’ll . . .”) form of hajimeru (“begin”).
- we can’t really tell who said this, but in the next frame, the shop owner’s position suggests that he was the speaker. Also, the use of informal (PL2) speech suggests that this is the boss speaking.

3

Sound FX: ビピッ プッ
Bibi! Bu! (sounds of knife cutting into fish)

Chef: どうやらどこぞで 特訓 を してきた ようだが . . .
Dōyara doko zo de tokkun o shite kita yō da ga apparently somewhere at special training (obj.) went and did it seems but “You apparently went and did some intense training somewhere, but . . .” (PL2)

そんな 一夜づけ 程度の腕 で、この俺に 太刀打ち 出来ると思う のかい？ sonna ichiya-zuke teido no ude de kono ore ni tachi-uchi dekiru to omou no kai?
 that kind of overnight pickling extent (’s)skill with this me with cross swords can think that (explan.-?)
 “. . . do you really think you can match me with the level of skills gained overnight?” (PL2)

- doko zo is a colloquial equivalent of dokoka, “somewhere.”
- tokkun combines the first kanji from 特別 tokubetsu (“special”) and 訓練 kunren (“training”) to make a word meaning “special/intensive training” or “crash course.” Tokubetsu kunren o suru means “have intensive training/take a crash course.”
- shite kita is the -te form of suru (“do”) and the plain/abrupt past form of kuru (“come”), so it is literally “do and come (back),” but it is the equivalent of the English “go do.” Since the time these two met at this shop in our first episode of “Oishinbo,” Jeff has indeed “gone and done” some intensive training.
- yō da after a verb means “it seems/appears” the action was done or will be done.
- ichiya-zuke refers to pickled vegetables (greens, cucumbers, eggplant, etc.) that are salted in the evening one day for consumption the next. Though such pickles are considered perfectly good food, they often get used as a metaphor for short or inadequate preparation, including overnight cramming for a test, ichiya-zuke no shiken benkyō.
- teido means “(to the) extent/level” of what immediately precedes it, so ichiya-zuke teido means “to the extent of overnight pickling” → “with the level of skills gained overnight.” No allows this entire phrase to modify ude.
- ude is literally “arm,” but is often used to mean “skill.”
- ore is a rough, masculine word for “I/me.” Kono ore looks like “this me,” but it really implies confidence/conceit — “someone like me/someone as skilled as me.”
- tachi = “(long) sword,” and uchi is the noun form of utsu (“hit/strike/attack”) → “cross swords.”
- dekiru = “can/able to.” The expression tachi-uchi dekiru means “be able to compete (with)/be a match (for).”
- . . . to omou no kai, with the explanatory no and the informal question particle kai, is literally “is it that you think . . . ?” → “do you (really) think . . . ?”

- 5 Sound FX: タンタンタンタン
Tan tan tan tan (sound of knife striking cutting board)
- 6 FX: スーツ
Sū! (effect of slicing smoothly through fish)
- 7 Chef: けっ!!何をグズグズしてやんでえ、魚が腐っちゃうぜ!!
Ke! Nani o guzu-guzu shite-yan dē Sakana ga kusatchimau ze pshaw! what (obj.) dawdling around (derog.-explan.) fish (subj.) will rot/spoil end/finish (emph.-masc.)
“Cripes! What’re you dawdling around for! The fish is gonna go bad.” (PL1)
- guzu-guzu = “slowly/sluggishly” and guzu-guzu suru = “be slow/dawdle/idle about.”
 - shite-yan dē is a contraction of shite-yagaru n da, the -te form of suru (“do”) plus the derogatory/insulting suffix yagaru and the explanatory no da (“it is that . . . /is it that . . . ?”). Using n(o) da to ask a question sounds very rough, like “What the hell do you think you’re doing!?”
 - kusatchimau is a contraction of kusatte shimau, from kusaru (“rot/spoil”) and shimau (“finish/complete”). Shimau after the -te form of a verb implies the action is complete and/or regrettable/undesirable.
 - ze is a rough, masculine particle for emphasis.
- 9 FX: スーツ
Sū! (effect of slicing smoothly through fish)
- 10 Sound FX: ガシッガシッガシッ
Gashi! gashi! gashi! (sound of smashing ice)
- 11 Chef: へい、お待ちっ!!
Hei o-machi!
okay/here (hon.)-waiting
“Here you are. Thanks for waiting!” (PL2)
- Sound FX: ズイ
Zui (sound of bowls being slid across the counter)
- hei is a less formal hai (“yes/okay/here”). It has something of a working man’s macho touch.
 - o-machi! is short for o-machidō-sama deshita, an expression used by anyone who has kept you waiting, especially store clerks and waiters/waitresses. It means “thanks for waiting/sorry to have kept you waiting.”
- 12 Shop Owner: やはり うちの花板 だ、
Yahari uchi no hanaita da as expected our best chef is 手際の良さも味の良さと 言いますからな。
Tegiwa no yosa mo aji no yosa to iimasu kara na dexterity of goodness [is] also flavor of goodness(quote) say because (emph.)
“That’s our star chef for you. As they say, good dexterity means good flavor.” (PL3)
- uchi literally means “within/inside,” but in many cases is used to mean “our house/shop/company.” Uchi no means “belonging to our house/shop/company,” or simply, “our.”
 - hana- or hana no (lit. “flowered/flowering”) is used to mean “beautiful/glorious/best,” and ita is the first syllable of itamae, “Japanese cook,” so the two together mean “best chef” + “star chef.” Itamae literally means “in front of the board,” referring to the manaita (“cutting board”) before which the itamae stands as he practices his art. Though this could theoretically apply to any cook/chef, one who specializes in Western-style food is called kokku, from the English “cook.”
 - tegiwa refers to one’s skill/deftness/dexterity in performing a task, and yosa is the noun form of the adjective i/yoī (“good/fine”), so tegiwa no yosa means “goodness of skill.” This usually implies the task was performed not only well but swiftly/efficiently.
 - iimasu is the PL3 form of iu (“say”).
 - na, an informal and mostly masculine equivalent of ne, implies he expects agreement.
- 14 Kurita: 何だか 水っぽい . . .
Nandaka mizuppoi
somehow watery/soggy
“Somehow it seems watery.” (PL2)
- -ppoi is a suffix meaning “is like/is full of/is characterized by.”

15 Shop Owner: 水っばい? 何 言ってるんです, これは 水々しい と 言うんだ よ。 Mizuppoi Nani itte-ru n desu Kore wa mizumizushii to iu n da yo watery/soggy what are saying this as-for fresh (quote) say/call (explan.) (emph.)
“Watery? What are you saying? This is what you call ‘fresh and moist.’” (PL2)

- itte-ru is a contraction of itte-iru, the progressive (“is/are –ing”) form of iu (“say”).
- in colloquial speech the question particle ka is often dropped. If the sentence does not contain a question word (in this case nani = “what?”), the question can be expressed simply by using the right intonation.
- mizumizushii has very positive connotations of “young/fresh/juicy,” in contrast to mizuppoi which is decidedly negative. The choice of the word mizumizushii in the Japanese here obviously came from its similarity to mizuppoi.
- yo is an emphatic particle especially appropriate when asserting/revealing something you think your listener doesn’t know.

17 Sound FX: シッシッシッ
Shi! shi! shi!
 (effect of “slicing” ice with knife)

18 Sound FX: シッシッシッ
Shi! shi! shi!
 (effect of “slicing” ice with knife)

19 Sound FX: シッシッ
Shi! shi!
 (effect of “slicing” ice with knife)

Shop Owner: 何っ, 柳刃 で 氷 を!!
Nani! Yanagiba de kōri o
 What? willow blade with ice (obj.)
“What?! (Cutting) ice with a yanagiba?” (PL2)

- yanagiba, or more fully yanagiba-bōchō (from hōchō, “kitchen knife”), literally means “willow blade (knife),” and is the name of the kind of knife Jeff is using.
- the implied verb at the end of the sentence is kiru, “cut/slice.”

20 Kurita: すごい わ ジェフ, 氷 が 切れる ようになったの ね!
Sugoi wa Jefu Kōri ga kireru yō ni natta no ne amazing (fem. colloq.) Jeff ice (subj.) can cut/slice got so that (explan.) (colloq.)
“That’s amazing, Jeff! You’ve gotten so you can slice ice, haven’t you! → “That’s amazing, Jeff! You’ve learned how to slice ice!” (PL2)

Jeff: どうぞ。 Dōzo
 please (take/eat)
“Please have some.” (PL3)

- sugoi = “amazing/incredible” and wa is an emphatic particle used mostly by females.
- kireru is the potential (“can/able to”) form of kiru (“slice/cut”).
- . . . yō ni natta is the past form of . . . yō ni naru, a phrase that is added to present tense verbs to give the meaning “become/get so that (action).”
- no ne is a feminine-sounding sentence ending that combines the explanatory no (“it’s that . . .”) and the ne that expects agreement from the listener (“is, isn’t it?/have, haven’t you?/etc.). Males would usually say n(o) da ne.
- dōzo is a polite word widely used when offering something, especially food or drink. It corresponds to English “please” in the sense of “please take/eat/drink/have” rather than “please give me.” See Basic Japanese 9 for further details.

- 23 Tanimura: うむ、この舌ざわり この歯ごたえ、比較にならないうまさだ!!
Umu kono shitazawari kono hagotae hikaku ni naranai umasa da uh huh this tongue-touch this tooth-response no comparison tastiness is “Yes, this texture, this firmness, it’s a tastiness that’s no comparison.” → “Yes, this texture, this firmness, it’s so tasty there’s no comparison!” (PL2)
- Kurita: ほんとっ、だいいち 全然 水っぽくないもの!!
Honto! Dai-ichi zenzen mizuppokunai mono really first of all/to begin with [not] at all not soggy (explan.)
 “Really! To begin with, it’s not soggy at all.” (PL2)
- shitazawari is shita (“tongue”) plus -zawari (from sawari, the noun form of sawaru, “touch”) and refers to how a food feels on the tongue. Hagotae is ha (“tooth/teeth”) plus -gotae (from kotae, “answer/response”) and refers to how food feels against the teeth when biting or chewing.
 - naranai is the negative form of naru, “become,” so hikaku ni naru is literally “become a comparison” → be comparable” and hikaku ni naranai means “is no comparison/not comparable.”
 - umasa is the noun form of the adjective umai (“good/tasty”).
- 24 Chef: 何いっ、仲間ほめ しゃがって!!
Nanii! Nakama-bome shi-yagatte what? praise one’s friend do-(derog.)
 “Wha-a-at?! You’re just praising your friend.” → “What are you talking about? Just because he’s your friend . . . !!” (PL1)
- as you can see from his expression, nanii! with the long final syllable can be a fighting word.
 - nakama = “friend/colleague” and -bome is from the verb homeru, “praise/compliment/applaud.” Nakama-bome o suru means to praise one’s friends just because they are friends rather than on their true merits.
 - shi-yagaru is suru (“do”) with the derogatory/insulting verb ending -yagaru in the -te form.
- 26 Chef: しゃ、社長...?
Sha- shachō
 pr- president
 “B-, Boss . . . ?” (PL2)
- shachō literally means “company head/president.” It’s standard for Japanese employees to address the president of their company by this title rather than by name.
- 27 Shop Owner: アメリカ人の 作った方が うまい...
Amerika-jin no tsukutta hō ga umai
 American person (subj.) made (compar.) tasty
 “The sashimi made by the American tastes better.” (PL2)
- これに 比べたら うちの花板 のは、舌ざわりが 悪くて べしょべしょで...
Kore ni kurabetara uchi no hanaita no wa shitazawari ga warukute besho-besho de this with iff/when compare our star chef (’s) as-for texture (subj.) is bad-and sopping wet and 味 が 抜けて しまっている...
aji ga nukete shimatte-iru flavor (subj.) come/go out has completely “Compared to this, my star chef’s (sashimi) has a bad texture, is soggy, and has lost all its flavor.” (PL2)
- tsukutta is the plain/abrupt past form of tsukuru (“make”).
 - hō ga . . . is used to make comparisons; hō ga umai means “. . . is tastier.” Amerika-jin no tsukutta is a complete thought/sentence (“The American made [it]”) modifying hō, which, strictly speaking, is a noun meaning “direction.” In modifying clauses, the subject particle ga frequently changes to no.
 - kurabetara is a conditional “if/when” form of kuraberu (“compare”).
 - nukete is the -te form of nukeru (“come/go out; escape”), and shimatte-iru is from shimau (“end/finish/complete”) indicating the action of nukeru is completely finished
- 28 Chef: そ... そんなバカな!!
So sonna baka na
 th- that kind of ridiculous/crazy
 “That’s crazy! → “That can’t be!” (PL2)
- baka means “fool/idiot” and adding -na (baka-na) makes it an adjective, “foolish/idiotic/ridiculous.”
- 29 Yamaoka: 全ては...包丁の使い方 にあるんだ...
Subete wa hōchō no tsukai-kata ni aru nda
 all as-for knife (’s) method of using in exists (explan.)
 “It’s all in how you use the knife.” (PL2)
- tsukai is from tsukau (“use”) and -kata is a verb suffix meaning “way/method of,” so hōchō no tsukai-kata is literally “knife’s method of use” → “method of using the knife” → “how you use the knife.”

刺身包丁を
いっばいに使って
なめらかに スーッと引くと、 刺身の切断面に 乱れはなく 細胞もきれいに 切れる。

30

切断面の乱れは、 空気にふれる 面積も大きく 酸化しやすいから、 味がすぐに 落ちるんだ。

ところが 乱暴に押し切る ように切ると、 切断面はデコボコの ザラザラに乱れて、 細胞はつぶれ
ひしゃげてしまう…

31

洗いにすると それが余計に目立つ、 荒っぽい切断面からは 魚肉のエキスが
流れ出し、かわりに 水が入り込んでくる。

水っぽくて 味が無くなって しまうのは、 そのせいさ。

32

30

Yamaoka: 刺身包丁 を いっぱいに使ってなめらかにスーッと引くと、
Sashimi-bōchō o ippai ni tsukatte nameraka-ni sū-tto hiku to sashimi knife (obj.) fully use-and smoothly gently pull/draw if/when
“If you use the full length of the sashimi knife and draw it smoothly, gently toward you. . .”

刺身の切断面に乱れはなく細胞もきれいに切れる。 sashimi no setsudan-men ni midare wa naku saibō mo kirei-ni kireru sashimi ('s) cross section/cut surface in disorder as-for is none-and cells also cleanly are cut
“the cut surface of the sashimi is free of roughness and the cells are sliced cleanly too.” (PL2)

- tsukatte is the -te form of tsukau (“use”); the form serves as “and” in this case.
- nameraka-ni means “smoothly” and sū-tto is an FX word with a range of meanings including “straight/gently/quickly.”
- midare = “disorder/confusion/roughness.”
- naku is a shortened nakute, the -te form of nai (“is none/does not exist”), which again serves as “and.”
- kirei-ni is the adverb form of the adjective kirei-na (“pretty/clean/neat”).
- kireru can be thought of as the potential “can/able to” form of kiru (“cut”), but there is also an independent verb, kireru, meaning “be cut/be severed.”

31

Yamaoka: ところが乱暴に押し切るように切ると、 Tokoro ga ranbō-ni oshikiru yō-ni kiru to on other hand roughly/forcibly cut by pushing like cut/slice if/when “On the other hand, if you slice forcibly by pushing down,”

切断面はデコボコのザラザラに乱れて、細胞はつぶれひしゃげてしまう...
setsudan-men wa dekokoko no zara-zara ni midarete saibō wa tsubure hishagete shimau cut surface as-for bumpy & rough/grainy become rough-and cells as-for are crushed and flattened (regret)
“the cut surface becomes bumpy and rough, and the cells get crushed and flattened. . .” (PL2)

Yamaoka: 切断面の乱れは、空気にあふれる面積も大きく酸化しやすいから、
Setsudan-men no midare wa kūki ni fureru menseki mo ōkiku sankā shi-yasui kara cut surface ('s) roughness-as-for air to touch area also large-and oxidation do easily because 味がすぐに落ちるんだ。 aji ga sugu ni ochiru n da flavor (subj.) quickly/right away declines (explan.)

“Because the roughness of the cut surface means the area exposed to air is large and it oxidizes easily, (the sashimi) quickly loses its flavor.” (PL2)

- yō-ni makes the preceding verb or phrase into an adverb that modifies the following verb, so oshikiru yō-ni kiru means “to cut in a push-cutting manner.”
- midare is the noun form, and midarete the -te form of the verb midareru (“become disordered/confused/messy”). dekokoko no zara-zara ni midarete literally means “become disordered in a bumpy and rough manner” → “become bumpy and rough.”
- ōkiku is a continuing form of ōkii (“big/large/great”) → “is large, and . . .”
- shi-yasui combines shi from the verb suru (“do”) and the suffix -yasui which, when used after a verb means it is easy to do the action: sankā shi-yasui = “easy to do oxidation” → “easily oxidizes.”
- kūki ni fureru is a complete thought/sentence (“touch/be exposed to air”) modifying menseki (“surface area”).
- aji ga ochiru = “flavor falls/drops/is lost” → “it loses flavor” • n da shows he is making an explanation.

32

Yamaoka: 洗いになるとそれが余計に目立つ、
Arāi ni suru to sore ga yokei ni medatsu washed if/when make it that (subj.) even more stands out “When you make it arai sashimi, it’s all the more noticeable.” (PL2)

荒っぽい切断面からは魚肉のエキスが流れ出し、
Arappoi setsudan-men kara wa gyoniku no ekisu ga nagare-dashi, rough/tagged cut surface from as-for fish flesh ('s) fluid (subj) flow out-and 変わりに水が入り込んでくる。 kawari ni mizu ga hairi-konde kuru in its place water (subj) enters into

“From the roughly cut surface of the fish, fluids flow out, and water soaks in to replace them.” (PL2)

Yamaoka: 水っぽくて味が無くなってしまふのは、そのせいさ。
Mizuppokute aji ga naku natte shimau no wa sono sei sa watery/soggy-and flavor (subj.) becomes lost (regret) (nom.)as-for that’s result/consequence (emph.)
“That’s why (the sashimi) becomes soggy and tasteless.” (PL2)

(continued on following page)

(continued from previous page)

- arai is from the verb arau (“wash”), and in this case refers to sashimi prepared in ice water and served on ice. This is supposed to improve the texture of the sashimi.
- ekisu is from the English “extract” — the full katakana rendering, ekisutorakuto, was too cumbersome to survive intact. Ekisu is used to mean “essential fluids” even when no actual “extracting” has taken place.
- -dasu as a verb suffix can mean either that the action begins or that it moves in an outward direction.
- hairi-konde is the -te form of hairi-komu (“enter into”; -komu emphasizes the inward direction of the action).
- naku is the adverb form of nai (“is none”) and naru means “become,” so naku naru literally means “become none” → “disappear/vanish/be lost.”
- sa is often used for emphasis when authoritatively/assertively telling others something they didn’t know.

35

Shop Owner: 私らは最も大事なことを忘れていたよ...

Watashi-ra wa mottomo daiji-na koto o wasurete-ita yo we/us as-for most important thing (obj.) had forgotten (emph.)

“We had forgotten the most important thing...” (PL2)

- the suffix -ra is a fairly rough/informal way of making nouns plural; watashi (“I/me”) → watashi-ra, “we/us.”
- wasurete-ita is from wasureru (“forget”).

36

Shop Owner: 私が花板に変な演出を強要したのがいけなかったんだ

Watashi ga hanaita ni hen-na enshutsu o kyōyō shita no ga ikenakatta nda
I/me (subj) star chef upon strange/unnecessary presentation (obj) forced (nom) (subj) was wrong (explan)

“My forcing unnecessary dramatics on my star chef was wrong.” → “It was wrong of me to demand unnecessary dramatics from my star chef.” (PL2)

我々はもう一度やり直そう...

Ware ware wa mō ichido yari-naosō
we as-for one more time let's do/start over

“Let’s make a new start.” (PL2)

- hen-na most often means “strange/odd/weird” but it can also mean “unnecessary/inappropriate.”
- enshutsu means “production” or “dramatic performance,” referring to the speed and flourish of the chef’s actions on page 66, and in our first episode of “Oishinbo” in Mangajin #16, pp. 62-64.
- kyōyō shita is the plain/abrupt past form of kyōyō suru (“compel/force/coerce”). The following no turns the entire phrase watashi ga hanaita ni hen-na enshutsu o kyōyō shita into a noun, and ga makes that noun phrase the subject of the sentence.
- ikenakatta is the plain/abrupt past form of ikenai (“is no good/it won’t do”), and n(o) da is explanatory.
- ware ware is a formal, “literary”-sounding word for “we.” It’s used mostly by men.
- mō before a number or quantity means “(that many/that much) more.”
- yarinaosō is from the verb yarinaosu — yari from varu (“do”), and naosō from naosu (“fix/correct”). A verb-stem plus naosu means “do over,” in order to fix/correct/alter/improve something.

38

Chef: そうします... アメリカ人に花板の座を奪われでもしたら

Sō shimasu Amerika-jin ni hanaita no za o ubaware demo shitara that way will do American by star chef (’s) seat (obj) be stolen something like if occurred

大変ですからね。

taihen desu kara ne
terrible is/would be because (colloq)

“I’ll do that. (Because) it’d be terrible if I lost my place as first chef to an American.” (PL2)

Jeff: そんな花板さん...!

Sonna hanaita-san that kind of star chef-(hon.)

“Hanaita-san, don’t be ridiculous!” (PL2)

- shimasu is the PL3 form of suru (“do”).
- ubaware is from ubawareru, the passive form of ubau (“steal/rob”) and . . . demo shitara is an expression meaning “if (I) did something like. . . /if something like . . . occurred,” so ubaware demo shitara literally means “if something like being stolen occurs” → “if (I) get it taken away” → “if (I) lose it.”
- sonna (“such a/that kind of”) implies something like “such a ridiculous thing to say,” or, “that kind of thing could not happen.”
- hanaita-san might literally be translated as “Mr. Star Chef,” but since Jeff’s use of this form is essentially a way of showing respect for the chef, it is similar to using “Sir” in English.

... to be CONCLUDED in the next issue of Mangajin

Classified ads are free for individuals and non-profit groups (up to 30 words). Commercial ads are $2.00 per word, $3.00 per word boldfaced, $30 minimum charge or $80/inch for display ads, discounts available for size and/or frequency (2 1/4" width, camera ready). Send to: MANGAJIN Classifieds, P.O. Box 49543, Atlanta, GA 30329

Categories: • Pen Pals • Notices & Events • Books & Publications • Computers & Software • Job Seekers • Clubs • Employment • Travel • Miscellaneous (MANGAJIN reserves the right to edit or reject any classified advertisement.)

日本語のclassified OKです!

日本語のclassified OKです!

日本語のclassified OKです!

Computers & Software

Japanese Language Instruction Hiragana/Katakana, Kanji exercises. Phonetic pronunciation, animated character generation, noun-verb-adjective reading exercises, quizzes, search options. Kana: $45 (Mac/HyperCard); Kanji: $65 (Mac or PC Compatible/Windows). Anonae Software, P.O. Box 7629, Berkeley, CA 94707 (510-527-8006)

GESM Japan Round Table

What can $4.95/mo* give you? In fact, quite a bit. With your computer plus a modem, dial one of GESM's local access points all over the US and Canada. Then type JAPAN. You are instantly a part of our diverse global network users who share information on Japanese culture, martial arts, language, manga, animation, technical translation tips, Kanji tips for Macs/PCs and a whole lot more! And, it is very easy to find out more about our exciting service. Call GE Information Services at 1-800-638-9636 *In US only. In Canada $5.95. Contact above number for more details.

an electronic hand-held dictionary as serious as you are about

Japanese

Canon

intelligent

W·O·R·D·T·A·N·K·

ID-7100

- ✓ 200,000-entry dictionary
- ✓ searches for kanji & jukugo
- ✓ input in romaji or kana
- ✓ calculator & calendar
- ✓ powerful expansion cards
- ✓ imported exclusively by GITCO
- ✓ other models, prices from $198

1-800-527-2607

Visa/MC

GITCO

Job Seekers

NYU senior, 2 years Japanese, East Asian Studies Major, seeking summer and fall employment, preferably in business. Marnie Kulanda, 5 E. 22nd Street, Apt. 22C, NY, NY 10010 (212-677-7723)

Saint Mary's University graduate seeks employment for a year in Japan. B. Comm. major: Marketing. Have taken language for one year, would like to continue within Japan. Mike Thompson, 174 Spinnaker Dr., Halifax, N.S., B3N 3C2 Canada (902-477-4456)

MBA (International Business Management), BA (Japanese Business Studies) seeks an International Business position. Ten years experience, three years in Tokyo. Contact William Smith Jr., 30 Hartford Road, Amherst, NY 14226-1501

BBA with Highest Honors in International Business & Marketing (1984). BA with Highest Honors (I hope) in Asian Studies (Summer 1992) with emphasis on Japan. Seventeen years of management experience in retail operations as company's General Manager. Active in community organizations. Sidney Grief, P.O. Box 43528, Austin, TX 78745 or fax: 512-478-5024

Miscellaneous

名刺

Japanese Business Cards

HF International

We translate & typeset your business cards in Japanese.

We also do translation & production of sales/promotional materials and videotape dubbing in 17 languages.

名刺
・
翻訳

HF International
2024 Powers Ferry Rd.
Suite 260
Atlanta, GA 30339
Tel (404) 988-9551
Fax (404) 988-9539

ダ ビ ン ゲ

Do you need educational material (K-12) on Japan? We have an interesting list of books and slide-sets. For catalogue send US$1 and self-addressed envelope (no stamps) to Pacific-Rim Slide-Shows, Suite 302, 130 East 15th Ave., Vancouver, BC, V5T 4L3 Canada

Are you a college student studying Japanese? Earn extra money marketing our hand-held translation products on campus. Call 1-800-JAPAN-07 for details. (GITCO)

QUALITY BANDS AND SOLO MUSICIANS AVAILABLE FOR BOOKINGS IN JAPAN AND OTHER FAR EAST COUNTRIES.

For information & availabilities contact:

ATLANTA MUSICIANS EXCHANGE
P.O. BOX 1705 DECATUR, GA 30031 U.S.A.
PHONE (404) 377-1188

Japan Notebook: bimonthly newsletter for educators, executives. Includes reviews, insights, grant/fellowship info, business tips, editorials. $30 Annual. Free trial: 9203 Springbreeze, Fort Wayne, IN 46804

Wanted to trade: subtitled anime. Send me your list, I'll send you mine. Jeff, 608 152nd St. #E-9, Seattle, WA 98148

Wanted to buy: Japanese language course on video-cassettes. Please write to: R.P. Weiser, 8033 Sunset Blvd. #394, Los Angeles, CA 90046

Wanted: Japanese (in Japan) familiar with manga. American writer preparing anthology of English translations of selected manga needs help in contacting 5-10 manga-ka to obtain permission to use material. Will reimburse. J.S., 10507 Brinwood, Houston, TX 77043

AUTUMN HOMESTAY IN JAPAN, Oct. 21-Nov. 5. For adults (19 and up) who don't want to be typical tourists. Make friends, see the sights, practice your Japanese. Families also welcome to apply. Contact LEX America, 68 Leonard St., Belmont, MA 02178 (617-489-5800)

Make big bucks writing, working in Japan: 1992 Writer's Japan $24.95. Work in Japan Handbook $19.95. Japan Research, 14755 Ventura Blvd., Suite 642-M, Sherman Oaks, CA 91403

Clubs

What is B.A.K.A.? It's the Banzai Anime Klub of Alberta! We promote Anime, Manga, Music & we produce a newsletter. Write: B.A.K.A., 5215 Hillview Crescent, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada T6L 1V9

Pen Pals

Japanese-American male, 22, seeks Japanese male/female friends. Interested in all sports, Japanese culture, manga, music. Write in Japanese and/or English. Ron Gormley, 187 Lakeview Dr., Shenorock, NY 10587

Male college student, 20, hopes to correspond in English with many people. Interests in Japanese and Chinese. Gino B. Sinopoli, 1819 Sinopoli Rd., Plant City, FL 33565

I'm a Singaporean Chinese girl (19) seeking pen pals to correspond in Japanese, English or Chinese. Interests: Culture, Music, Drama, raving, Handicrafts. Hui Min, 5000C #10-12, Laguna Park, Singapore 1544

Female Chinese, 24, seeks friends interested in Japanese. Harijanti Chandra, 68 Jalan Labu Ayer, Singapore 1953

Ikebukuro American man wants to meet Japanese people to exchange translation practice. John, 5396-1809, 2-55-12-206 Higashi Ikebukuro, Toshima-ku, Tokyo

American family man, 50, would like to write to ladies working in the Mizu Shoba. P.O. Box 424053, San Francisco, CA 94142-4053

French girl seeks to correspond in French with people all over the world who like anime. Please write to: Coryn Massot, Chemin de la Planquette, S.T.T., 83130 La Garde, France

American male airline employee, 26, wants Japan-based airline employees for pen pal connections. Love anime and Japanese pop music. Write me! James Little, RT 2, Box 88k, Apt. #1-2, Horseshoe, NC 28742

American girl, 21, seeks Japanese girls, 18-25 to correspond with. English please! Interests: manga, anime, American comics, sci fi, fantasy and music. Will try to answer all letters. Elin Winkler, 4936 Windsor Hill, San Antonio, TX 78239

Japanese female, 27, seeks pen pal. I'm beginning to learn English conversation, but I'm not so good at English. Love for travel. 3-3-18 Higashimatabei-cho, Minami-ku, Nagoya, 457 Japan

Two crazy Japanese women, ages 24 and 29, who teach English to children, seek genki-na Americans to exchange info with about our cultures and/or language teaching. Reply to Saori and Yoko. Japan 064, Sapporo-shi, Chuo-ku, Minami 8 jo, Nishi 4 chome, Daikyo Bilu, Mineluba Gakuin

Japanese, Taiwanese and Korean students studying in Japan desperately seek pen pals in USA or England. TFLC Pen Pals, C/-Carol 1-11-7 Shinjuku, Shinjuku-ku, Tokyo 160 Japan

American male, 23, seeks friends to correspond in English and Japanese. I'm studying Japanese and may be moving there for school. Kevin McKenna, 5827 Willow Creek, Canton, MI 48187

I would like to get some Japanese science fiction books in Japanese (not manga - real books). Please write Stone, 2401 University Ave. W, St. Paul, MN 55114-1507

American Christian male, 19, seeks Japanese female/male pen pals to discuss manga, arts, movies, or just for fun. Seeking help in learning Japanese culture/language. Correspond in English. Craig Churaman, H.M.G. 475 Tenth Avenue. New York, NY 10018

Japanese female, 27, seeks friends who believe in Jesus Christ and like art, reading, travel and Japanese culture. Write to Youry, 4040 Prospect Ave. #1, Los Angeles, CA 90027

Chinese male coll. student, 19, seeks Japanese female pen pal, I enjoy art, exchanging cultures, entertainment, Wei H. Ho, 5502 Dobbs St. #76, Los Angeles, CA 90032 (Try me)

Tired of fighting for your copy of MANGAJIN?

Why jostle with the crowd at the newsstand and risk missing an issue of MANGAJIN? There is only one way to make sure your collection is complete — jump in and subscribe! Act today to reserve your one-year subscription and get 10 issues for $30 — that's $15 off the cover price (Canada=$45, overseas=$70)! Call 1-800-552-3206 or write to: MANGAJIN, Box 49543, Atlanta GA 30359. Your well-being depends on it!

KanjiSama™

KanjiSama is a complete kanji reference tool with powerful kanji lookup modes and built-in Japanese-English dictionaries for the Macintosh!

Modes
Kanc	KK 1
Meaning	KM 2
Radical	KR 3
Stroke	KS 4
	5
	6
	7
	8 9 10 11 12
	13
	14
	15
	16
	17
	18 19+

- Not just another Japanese language learning tool—KanjiSama™ is a complete reference for intermediate to advanced Japanese readers.
- A convenient Kanji Dictionary, and two Japanese-English Dictionaries (General and Technical) rolled into a rapid computer reference tool.
- Fast, seamless operation compared to Hypercard-based programs.
- Cross-references to popular kanji dictionaries.
- Includes the new Kanji Alphanumeric Code (Kanc) lookup method.
- Search dictionaries using any character or combination of characters.
- Save compounds, readings and definitions to text files for use in the Hypercard drilling stack 'Kunren'.
- Five easy-to-use kanji lookup modes.
- Access to hiragana, katakana and 2965 kanji (JIS-1 set).
- KanjiSama is a stand-alone application (not Hypercard-based) and requires the Apple Japanese System Software, KanjiTalk.

~ Kunren ~

The Kunren drilling stack can have any number of 'flash cards' for drilling practice import kanji, readings, and meanings from KanjiSama and practice by using the built-in intelligent drilling mechanism—or use Kunren to create your own exercises

KanjiSama—$149 • Kunren—$15
 KanjiSama & Kunren—$159 • KanjiSama Demo—$15
 Price includes shipping anywhere in the world. • CA residents add 7.75% sales tax.

To Order: Send Check, Money Order, or International Money Order.
 Site licenses available. Please call or Fax with questions.

SANBI Software Company
 3594 Crowell Avenue
 Riverside, CA 92504
 Phone / FAX: (714) 352-0276

Copyright ©1990 SANBI Software Company. All rights reserved

LANGUAGE LEARNING SECTION

日本語ジャーナル
The Nihongo Journal

BACK ISSUES

$8.00 each

- 6: The Exam Wars, Country Names in Sports
- 7: Baseball and the Japanese, International Trade
- 8: The Ninja, TV Historical Dramas, Elementary Course: Baseball
- 9: The JLPT, The Farmers Vs. Narita Airport, Kanji Isn't That Hard
- 10: Karaoke, Walk Through Kappabashi, Self-Study Course for JLPT(Level 1)
- 11: Japanese Gods & Buddhas, Age of Robots, JLPT (Level 2)
- 12: Japan's Labor Trends; Godzilla, Ultraman are Back!; JLPT (Level 3)
- 1/92: Ainu, Monkey and the Japanese, Modern Japanese: Miniature Aquarium
- 2/92: Studying Abroad in Japan from Southeast Asia, Essay: Jakucho Setouchi
- 3/92: Pachinko, Stylish Female Office Workers, Modern Japanese: Intro Edition
- 4/92: Katakana—An Initiation, Vocabulary Bldg:The Fun Method, Bus. Writing
- 5/92: The Liberal Demo. Party, Ghouls, Goblins & Imaginary Beings, Symbols in Kanji

Read Japanese Today

Read 300 of the most common characters in a few hours whether or not you now have any knowledge of the grammar or spoken language. Reviewed in MANGAJIN No. 1, $7.50

Kenkyusha's Furigana E-J Dictionary

sample 見本, 見本 (を)取る; (質)をたぬす; Statistics リンゴ.

This dictionary gives readings in hiragana for all kanji used in definitions and explanations. 980 pages, 49,000 headwords, heavyweight paperback, $24.00

Essential Japanese Grammar

A handy summary that covers all the grammar needed for speech and comprehension. A good concise reference. Not a textbook, but you can learn plenty by browsing through, $4.50

Two Books that can help you learn to read & write Japanese

Kanji & Kana

Presents the 1,945 jōyō (“daily use”) kanji in the format shown below, along with 60+ pages of kanji and kana history, rules, and trivia. Indexed by rōmajireading, number of strokes, and radical. Reviewed in MANGAJIN No. 1, $18.50.

	358	GAKU, music; RAKU, pleasure; tano(shimu) , enjoy; tano-(shii) , fun, enjoyable, pleasant
	75	音楽 ongaku music	347
	2324	文楽 bunraku Japanese puppet theater	111
	楽	楽家 rakutenka optimist	141, 165
		安楽死 anrakushi euthanasia	105, 85

A Guide to Reading and Writing Japanese

Gives easy-to-follow stroke order diagrams for 881 “essential characters,” plus hiragana/katakana. Also gives simple listing for 989 more, for a total of 1,850 kanji. Indexed by rōmaji reading and stroke count. Reviewed in MANGAJIN No. 1, $14.00

	' 1 1	GAKU, music; RAKU, comfort, ease; tano(shii) , pleasant
	白 白 白	楽しみ tanoshimi , pleasure 音楽会 ongakukai , concert, musicale
331 13 strokes	白 白 楽	気楽 kiraku , ease, comfort (木 15)

NEW!

Ojama Shimasu

The off-the-wall humor in this series is reminiscent of The Far Side. It's popular among MANGAJIN readers as the "sheep counting manga." Three volume set, original Japanese edition. $19.50

NEW!

Obatarian

Obatarian's obnoxious ways and selfish personality have endeared her to thousands of MANGAJIN readers. Now you can add this middle-aged housewife terror to your library! Five volume set, original Japanese edition. $31.50

What's Michael

A familiar feline to MANGAJIN readers, this cat appears in a variety of settings. Five volume set, original Japanese edition. $31.50

Don't Cry, Tanaka-kun

This salary-man anti-hero has been a regular feature in MANGAJIN since issue No. 1. Single volume, original Japanese edition. $7.00

MANGAJIN • M A N I A

T-Shirt: Sturdy 50/50 blend, a perfect compliment to any wardrobe! No exam required. $7.50 ($5.00 with subscription)

Posters: MANGAJIN posters, covers of issues 7, 10, 11, 12, 13 printed on heavier poster paper, 9" x 12" size. (Bottom captions vary.) $8.00/set of five

Back Issues: $6.00 each

- #6: Matsumoto Profile, Ginga Tetsudō 999 (I), Dai-Tōkyō, Pocket Story, Tanaka-kun
- #8: Japanese CAI, Urusei Yatsura (II), Ginga Tetsudō 999 (Part III), What's Michael
- #9: The Manga Market, Tanioka Yasuji (Wink), Urusei (III), Ginga (IV), What's Michael
- #10: Japanese Movies, Obatarian, OL Shinkaron, Sarari-kun, Dai-Tōkyō, Ginga (V), Pocket Story
- #12: Japanese Beer, The Far Side, Tanaka-kun, Dai-Tōkyō, Ningen Kōsaten (II)
- #13: Controversial Submarine Saga: Chinmoku no Kantai, The Far Side, Chijō Saikyō no Jinrui, Korobokkuru-kun, What's Michael
- #14: Art of the Japanese Adman: Creative Japanese Product Names, Beranmei Tō-chan, Tsurumoku Bachelors' Dormitory
- #16: Eating Cheap in Tōkyō, Results from Our Reader Survey, O-jama Shimasu, Bono Bono, Sarariiman Senka
- #17: Tezuka Osamu: Japan's "God of Manga," Konnichi-wa Kuriko-san, What's Michael, Oishinbo (II), The Phoenix, Tanaka-kun

renewal

10% DISCOUNT FOR SUBSCRIBERS ONLY!

CHARGE IT! CALL 1-800-552-3206 WITH VISA OR MASTERCARD!

Description	Quantity	Unit Price	Total

All prices include shipping & handling (available only in US). Georgia residents please add 5% sales tax.

check enclosed charge my Visa/Mastercard

Subtotal _____
 Tax if applicable _____
 -10% if applicable _____
TOTAL _____

Name _____
 Street _____
 City _____ State _____ Zip _____
 Telephone _____
 Signature _____

Charge It!

Mastercard Visa
 Acct. Number _____
 Exp. Date _____

MANGAJIN, P.O. Box 49543, Atlanta, GA 30359 Tel: 404-634-3874 Fax: 404-634-1799

V o c a b u l a r y • S u m m a r y

新たに	arata-ni	newly (formal)	水っぽい	mizuppoi	watery/soggy
棒グラフ	bō gurafu	bar graph	無関係	mukankei	irrelevant
-部	-bu	department/division	流れる	nagareru	flow/drain (v.)
着任する	chakunin suru	take up a new position/job	滑らかに	nameraka-ni	smoothly
知力	chiryoku	intelligence/mental powers	肉体	nikutai	the body/flesh
朝礼	chōrei	morning gathering/greetings	飲み込む	nomikomu	swallow (v.)
団体	dantai	organization/group	抜ける	nukeru	come/go out
電気	denki	electricity	溺れる	oboreru	drown
電機	denki	electrical appliance	押す	osu	push/shove (v.)
どうやら	dōyara	apparently/somehow	泳ぐ	oyogu	swim (v.)
営業	eigyō	sales/business	乱暴に	ranbō ni	roughly/forcibly
円高	endaka	high yen (exchange rate)	乱戦	ransen	turbulent battle/scuffle
船酔い	funa-yoi	seasick	留守番する	rusuban suru	watching the house
不振	fushin	stagnation/slump	騒ぐ	sawagu	make noise/be boisterous
午前/午後	gozen/gogo	AM/PM	請求する	seikyū suru	request/claim (v.)
業界	gyōkai	(a particular) industry	正式な	seishiki-na	official/formal
配属	haizoku	assignment (to)/posting	戦国時代	sengoku jidai	Warring States period
比較	hikaku	comparison	戦場	senjō	battlefield
誇り	hokori	pride	戦争	sensō	warfare
ほめる	homeru	praise/compliment/applaud	社員	shain	employee(s)
本社	honsha	headquarters/main offices	始業時間	shigyō jikan	starting time (workday)
生き物	ikimono	living thing/creature	新製品	shin-seihin	new products
事件	jiken	event(s)	死ぬ	shinu	die
自己紹介	jiko shōkai	self-introduction	職場	shokuba	workplace
人物	jinbutsu	person(s)	職歴	shokureki	employment history
実力	jitsuryoku	merit/ability	食欲	shokuyoku	appetite
実在	jitsuzai	actual existence/actuality	総務部	sōmu-bu	general affairs division
-課	-ka	section (of a company)	姿	sugata	appearance/shape
開発	kaihatsu	development	数字	sūji	numbers/figures
係長	kakari-chō	group leader (business)	体力	tairyoku	physical strength
拡充	kakujū	expansion	短縮	tanshuku	shorten/reduce
関係	kankei	relationship/connection	助ける	tasukeru	help/assist/rescue
肩	kata	shoulder(s)	戦い	tatakai	battle/fight
系列	keiretsu	network/affiliation	手際	tegiwa	dexterity/deftness/skill
化粧品	keshōhin	cosmetics	店舗	tenpo	store/shop
企業	kigyō	business enterprise	溶ける	tokeru	dissolve/melt
危険な	kiken-na	dangerous	取引	torihiki	deal/transaction
決める	kimeru	decide	突入する	totsunyū suru	rush/charge into
勤務	kinmu	service/duty	作る	tsukuru	make
刻苦	kokku	hard work/arduous labor	罪	tsumi	sin/crime
幸福	kōfuku	happiness	奪う	ubau	steal/rob
厚生	kōsei	welfare/well being	生まれる	umareru	be born
腐る	kusaru	rot/decay/spoil	忘れる	wasureru	forget
強要する	kyōyō suru	compel/force/coerce	役員室	yakuin-shitsu	executive office(s)
枕	makura	pillow	やめる	yameru	stop (v.)
まさしく	masashiku	truly/really (formal)	呼び名	yobina	nickname/given name
乱れる	midareru	become disordered/messy	愉快的	yukai-na	pleasant
みじめな	mijime-na	miserable/pitiful	輸出	yushutsu	export
水々しい	mizumizushii	fresh/young/juicy	材料	zairyō	material/ingredients

The Vocabulary Summary is taken from material appearing in this issue of MANGAJIN. It's not always possible to give the complete range of meanings for a word in this limited space, so our "definitions" are based on the usage of the word in a particular story.